

Best Moral Stories for Kids

Two Girls and a Bag of Gold Coins

One day, two little girls, Emma and Katherine, were walking down the street.

Suddenly, Emma noticed a bag lying on the ground. When she opened it, she was surprised to see it was full of gold coins!

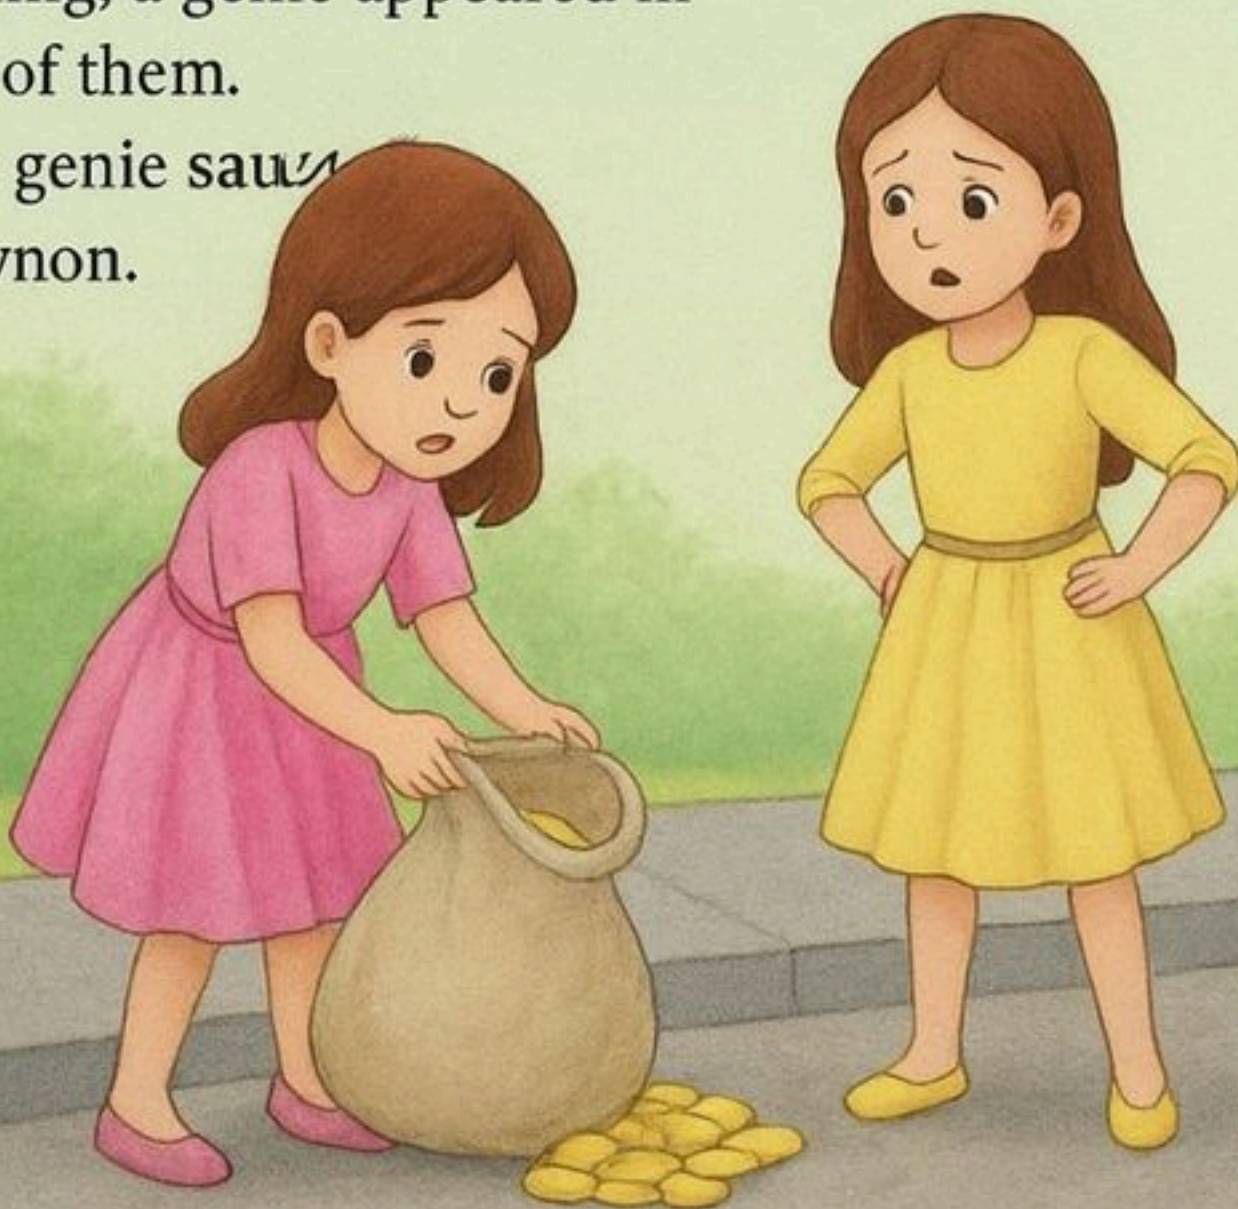

“Oh! We found a bag of gold coins!”

Katherine exclaimed.

Emma quickly replied, “We? I was the one who found it. You were busy looking at the birds. These coins are mine.”

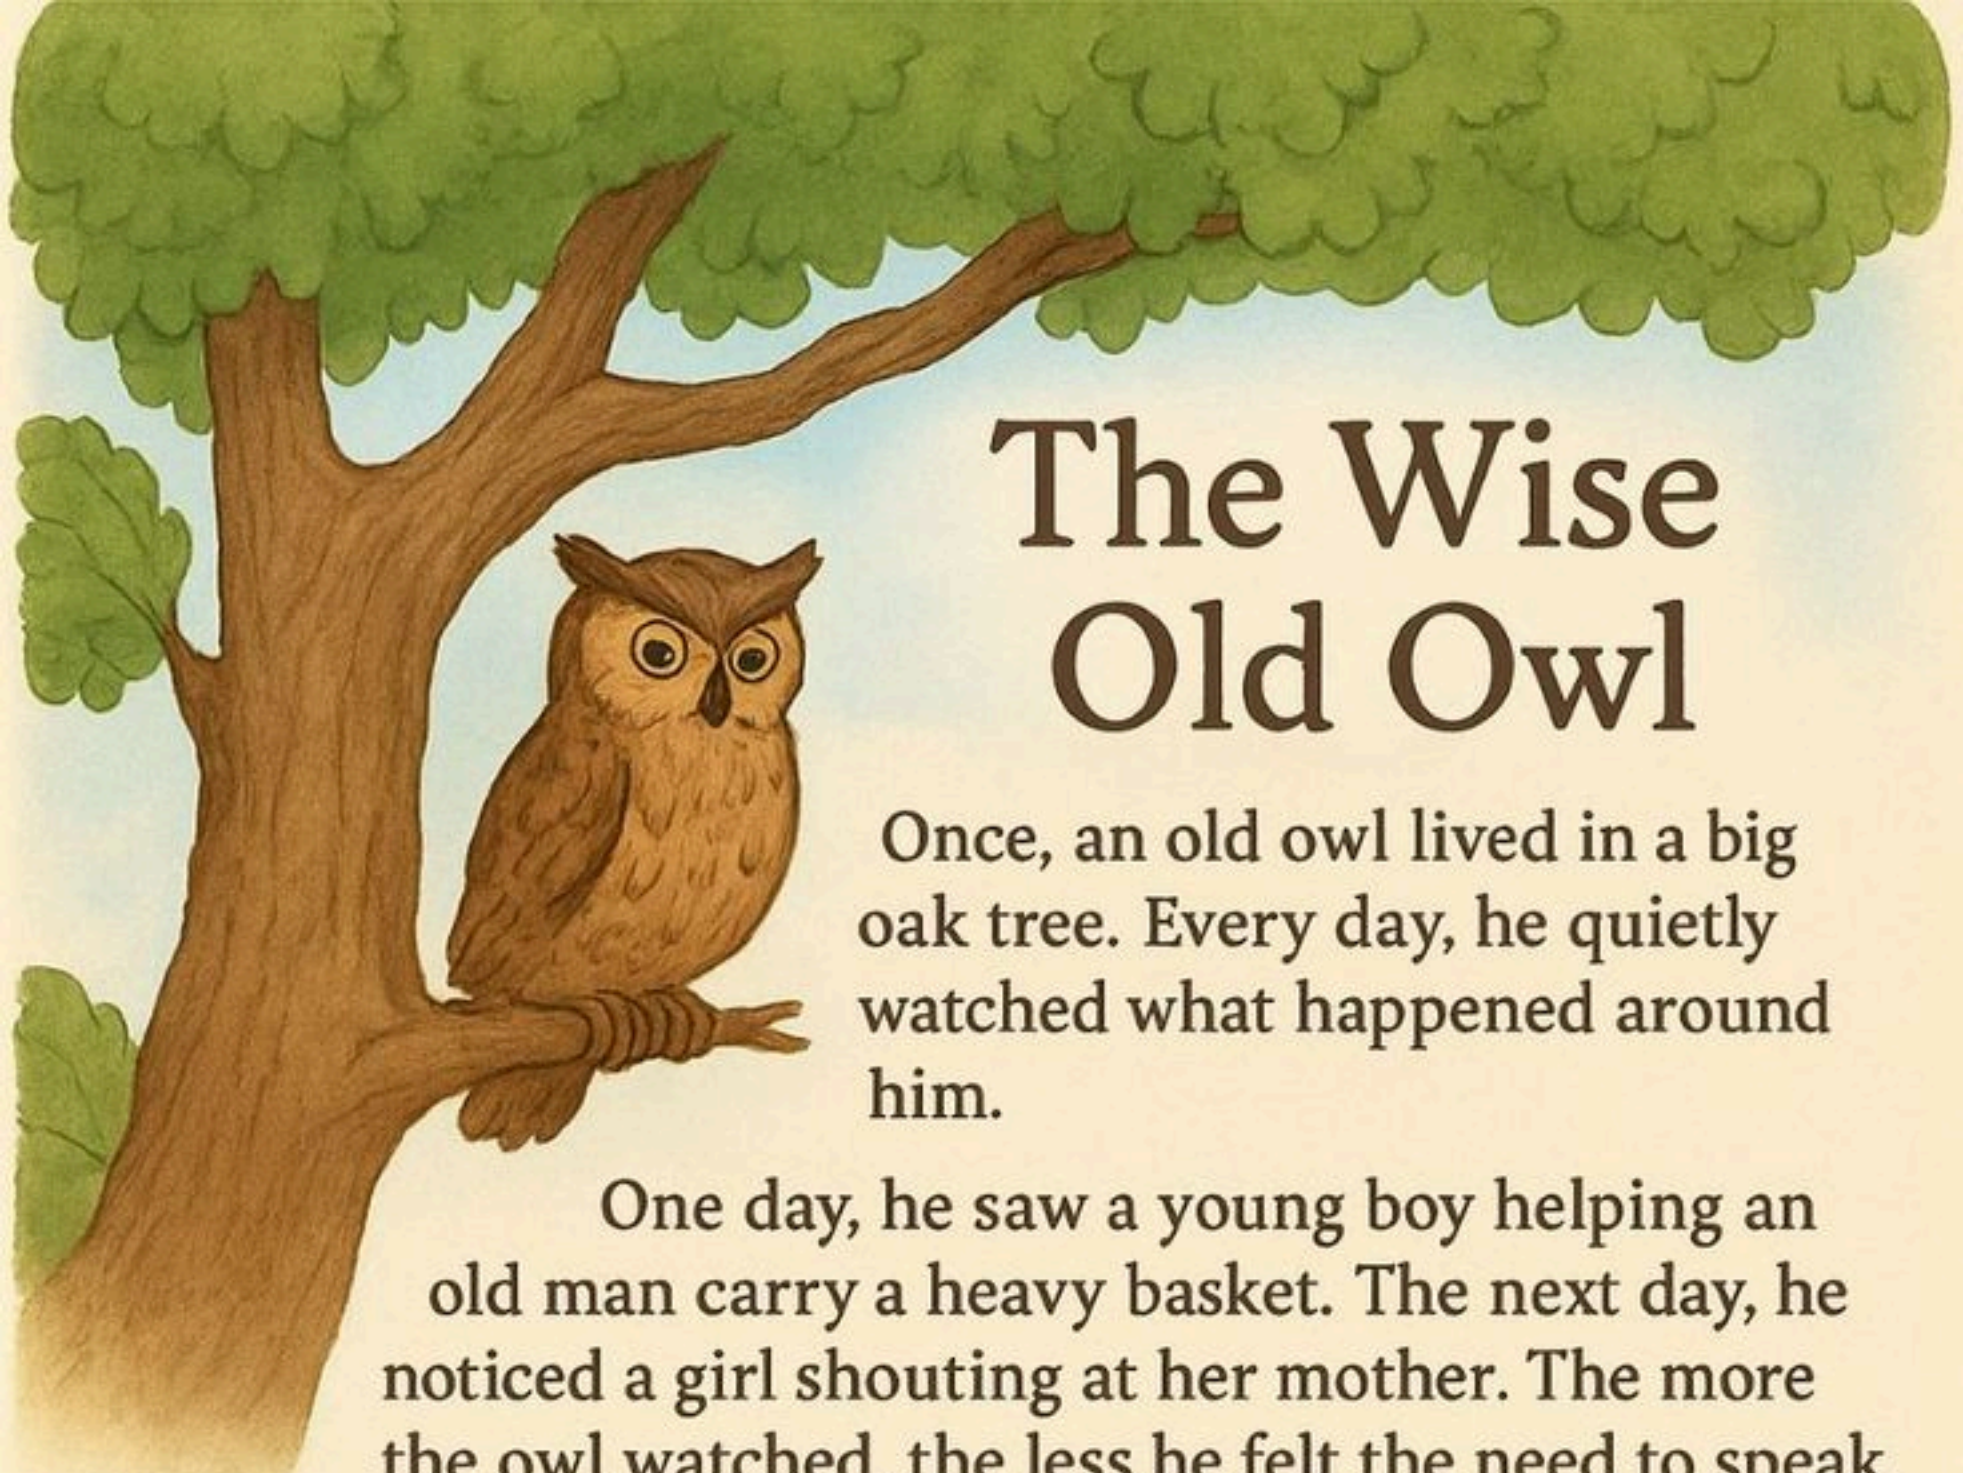

Katherine felt upset, but before she could say anything, a genie appeared in front of them.

The genie said, “You have found a bag of gold coins. But remember, what you sow, so shall you reap.”

Emma was frightened. “Oh no, what have we gotten ourselves into?” cried she.

Moral: What you sow, so shall you reap.

The Wise Old Owl

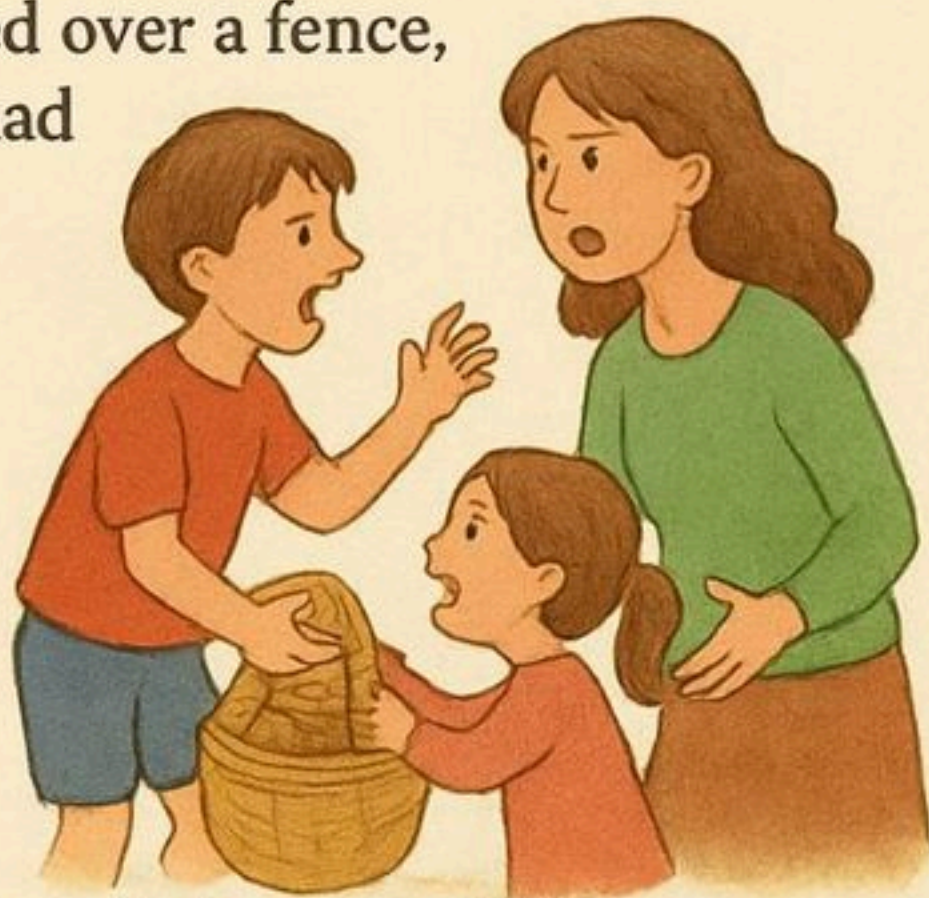

Once, an old owl lived in a big oak tree. Every day, he quietly watched what happened around him.

One day, he saw a young boy helping an old man carry a heavy basket. The next day, he noticed a girl shouting at her mother. The more the owl watched, the less he felt the need to speak.

As time passed, he talked less but listened more. He often heard people telling stories. Some spoke wisely, while others said things that were not true—like a woman claiming an elephant jumped over a fence, or a man boasting that he had never made a mistake.

The owl kept watching and listening. He noticed that some people grew kinder and better, while others grew worse. But the owl himself became wiser each day.

Moral: If we observe more, talk less, and listen carefully, we can become wiser too.

The Golden Goose

Once upon a time, in a little village, there lived three brothers. The youngest was called Simpleton, because people thought he wasn't very clever. But unlike the others, he had a kind heart.

One day, while cutting wood, Simpleton met a poor old man. Feeling sorry for him, he shared his food. The old man, grateful for his kindness, showed him a tree where a strange golden goose was sitting.

Simpleton took the goose home. On the way, greedy villagers tried to pluck its golden feathers, but whoever touched the goose got stuck fast! Before long, a whole line of people were stuck together following Simpleton and the goose.

This sight made the sad king laugh out loud. Delighted, the king rewarded Simpleton by letting him marry the princess,

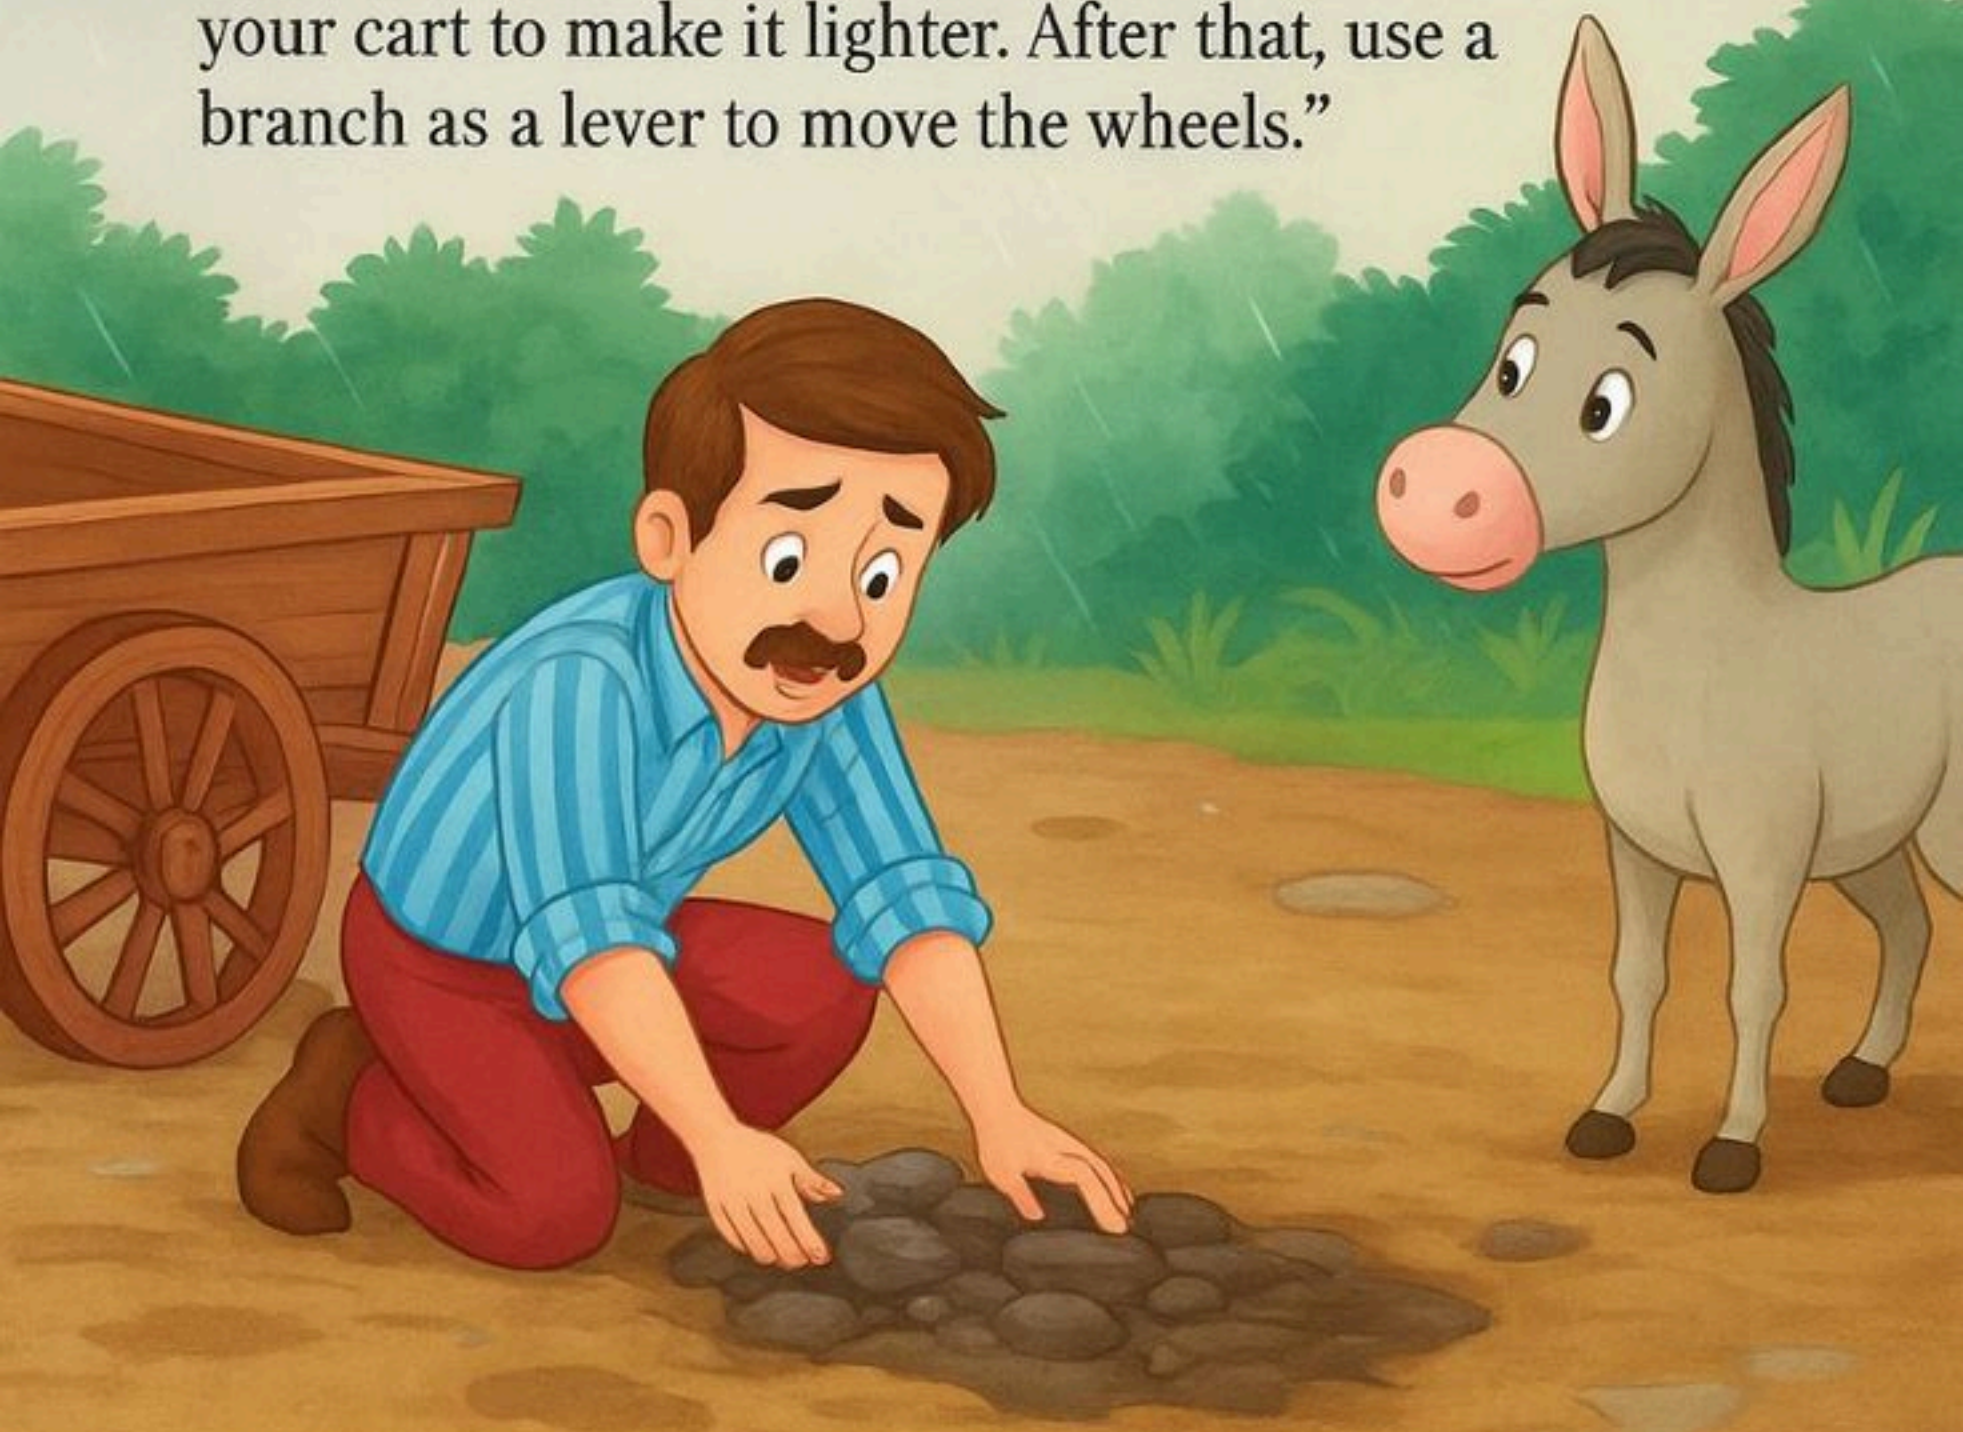

Moral: Kindness and simplicity bring unexpected blessings, while greed only causes trouble.

The Cart Driver's Helper

One rainy day, a cart driver was struggling on the muddy road with his donkey. The wheels of his cart got stuck, and in anger, he cursed the road, the rain, and even the donkey.

Tired and upset, he prayed for help and promised to light a candle in the temple. Then he seemed to hear a voice saying,

“Before you pray, stop beating the donkey. First, find some stones to fill the hole. Then, unload your cart to make it lighter. After that, use a branch as a lever to move the wheels.”

Moral: God helps those who help themselves.

THE WIZARD OF OZ

Dorothy lived on a farm with her aunt, uncle, and her little dog Toto. One day, a great cyclone came, and before Dorothy could reach safety, she and Toto were swept away. They landed in a strange land, where the Good Witch of the North gave Dorothy a pair of magical silver shoes.

On her journey, Dorothy met many dangers but also made new friends: a Scarecrow, a Tin Man, and a Lion. Together they traveled the Yellow Brick Road. At last, they reached the Wizard, who said he would help Dorothy

The Brave Mouse

In a small village, there lived a little mouse named Max. One day, he saw a cat sneaking up on some birds. Max quickly thought of a clever plan. He distracted the cat and led it away, giving the birds a chance to fly to safety.

The villagers were proud of Max and called him a hero, because he saved the birds without being afraid.

Moral: Courage isn't about size. Even the smallest can do great things.

The Milkmaid and her Milk

Molly is a milkmaid.

She puts milk in a pail and goes to the market.

On the way, she dreams.

“I will sell the milk,” she thinks.

“With the money, I will buy a chicken.

The chicken will lay eggs.

I will sell the eggs and buy more animals!

She is happy with her dreams.

But suddenly, she trips.

The pail falls. The milk is gone.

Molly is sad.

She goes home with nothing.

Her mother says,

Don't make plans on things that may not happen.

The Good Deed

One day, a lion was chasing a deer. The deer ran swiftly and escaped. Later, the deer saw the lion caught in a hunter's net. Feeling sorry for the lion, the kind deer approached him and freed him from the net. The lion thanked the deer and realized the importance of kindness and gratitude. From that day, the lion gave up hunting animals and became the friend of deer.

The Wise Little Monkey

In a jungle, a young monkey and an old tortoise were friends. One day, a hungry jackal asked the monkey to fetch some fruits. The clever monkey plucked a banana from the tree and gave it to the tortoise. The tortoise then gave the banana to the jackal. The jackal was fooled. The young monkey's cleverness saved them from trouble.

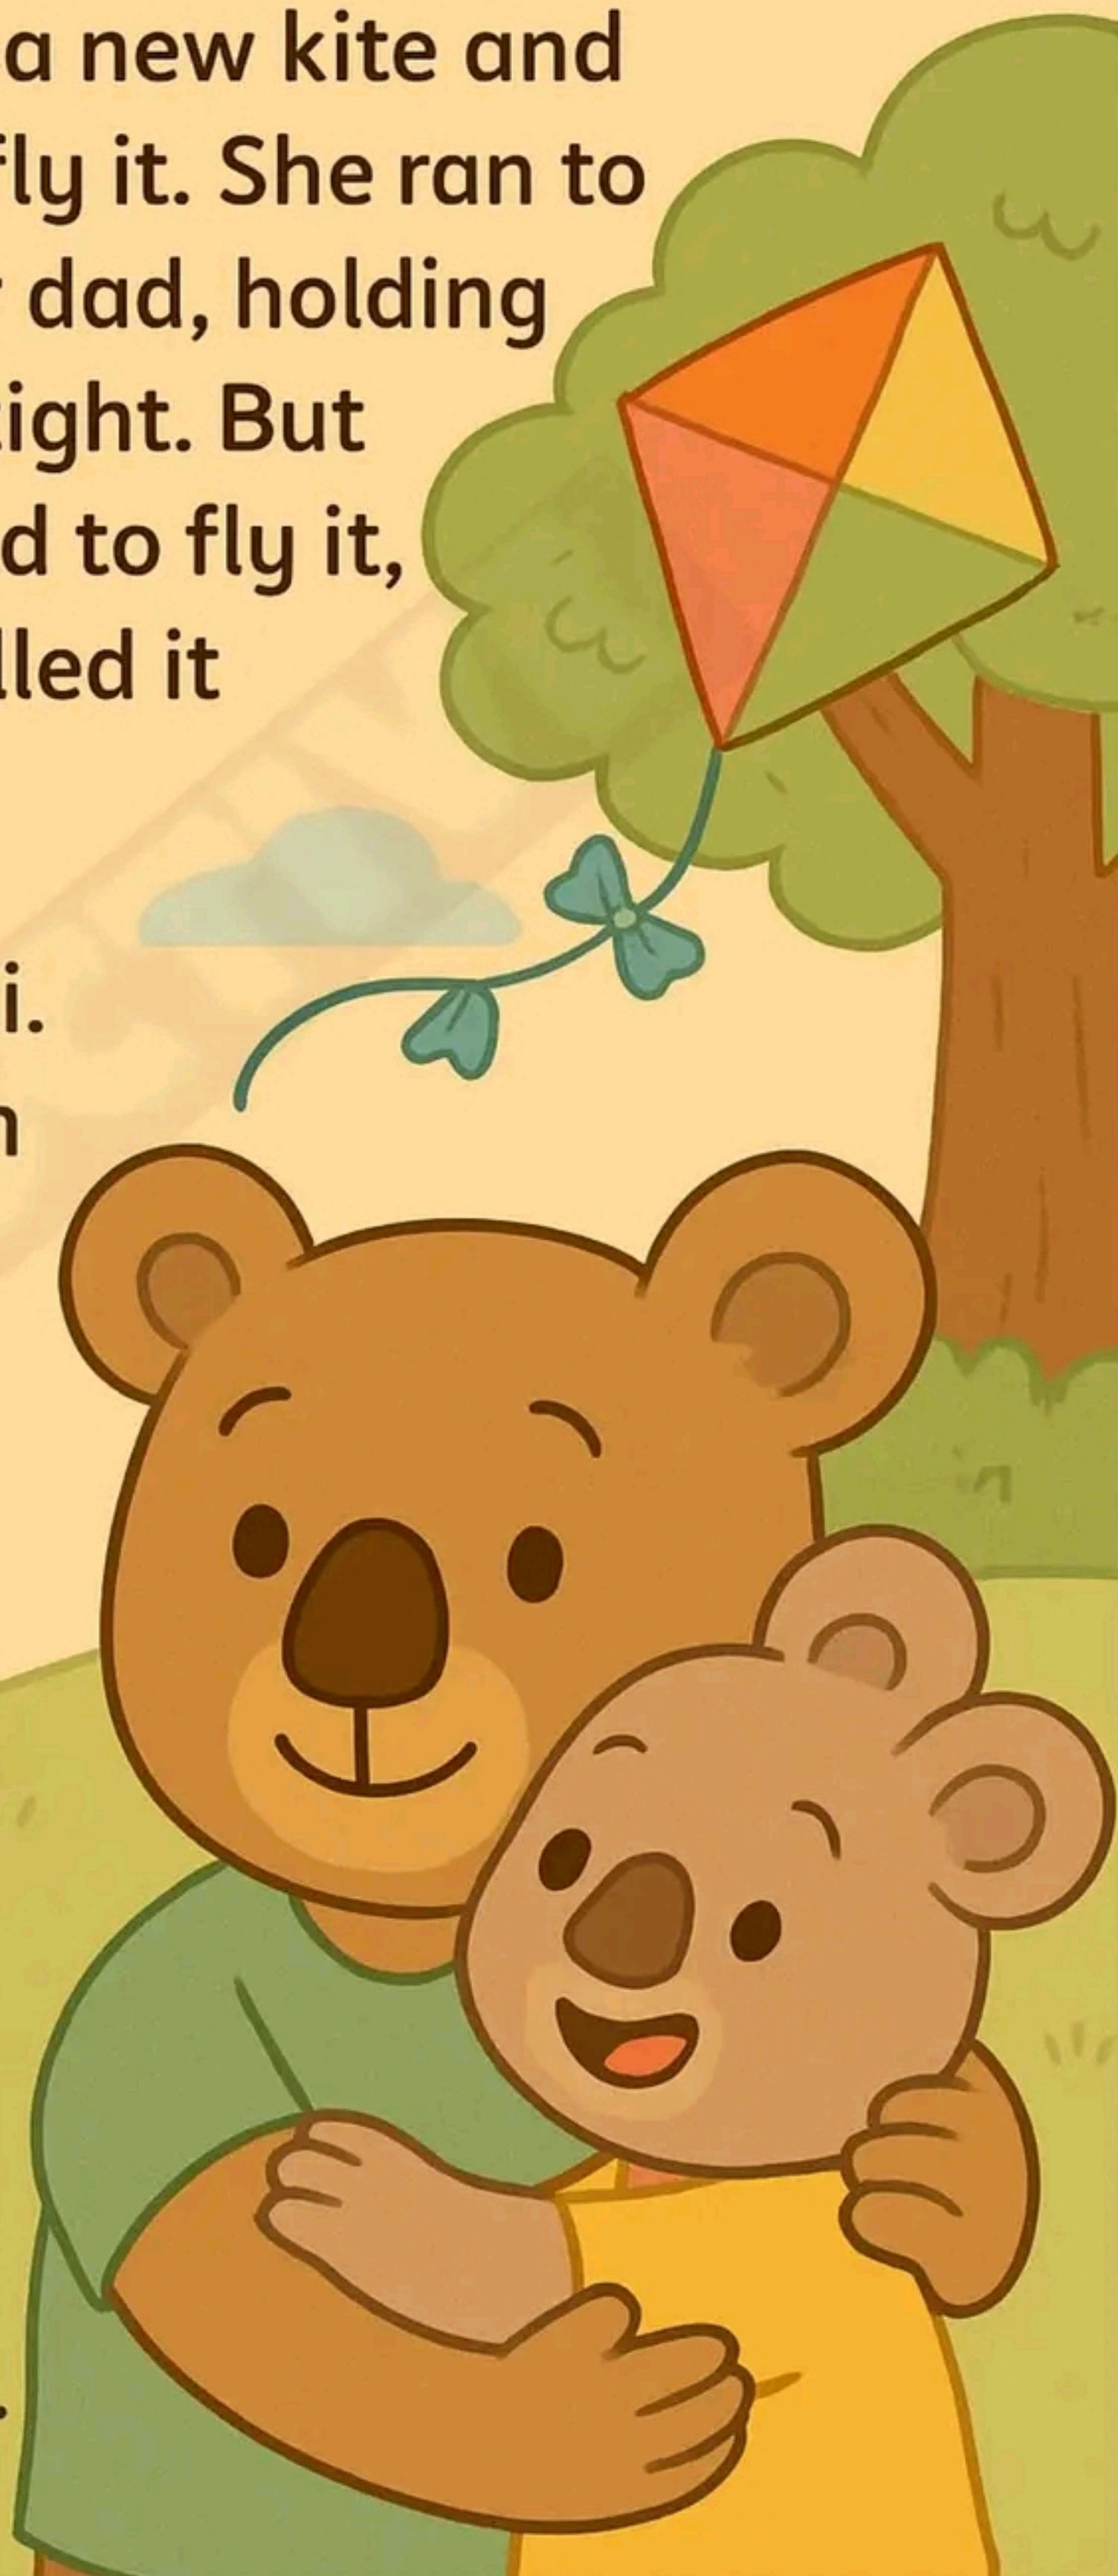

The Lost Kite

Kiki Koala made a new kite and couldn't wait to fly it. She ran to the park with her dad, holding the colorful kite tight. But just as she started to fly it, a strong wind pulled it from her hands!

'Oh no!' cried Kiki. The kite flew high into a tree.

Her dad hugged her and said, "Let's work together."

With a big stick and a little teamwork, they got the kite down. Kiki smiled wide,

Max and the Rain

Max was on his way to the park when it started to rain. He took off his raincoat and put it over his head. “Here,” said Max. “Climb on up! You’ll fit right under here!”

He gave the raincoat—and a ride—to his friend, and off they went.

Kit's Shoes

Kit was happy to start the day, but she couldn't figure out which shoe went on which foot! She huffed as she tried to put them on.

Her friend Ella the elephant offered to help. "Here," said Ella. "Red goes on the outside, and the blue goes on the inside!"

Kit smiled and finished dressing all by herself.

Greed is a Curse

Once, a fisherman caught a golden fish that could grant wishes. He let it go, but his wife was greedy and asked him to go back and ask for a cottage. Soon she wanted to be a queen and live in a palace. Annoyed, the fisherman told the golden fish he wanted his wife back in the old cottage.

Moral: Greed is undoubtedly a curse

Lion and rabbit

Once upon a time, in a forest far away, there lived a lion. He used to kill around 2-3 animals every day for food. The animals were worried and went to discuss this with the lion. He agrees not to kill any other animal if one of them voluntarily comes to him for food.

This went on for a long time. One day, it was a rabbit's turn. While on his way, he saw an old well and hatch a plan to kill the lion.

The lion then asked the rabbit to meet the lion. The rabbit took him to the well and pointed at it, saying that was where the other lion lived. The lion jumped into the well, mistook its own reflection for another lion and died.

MORAL: Intelligence is superior to physical strength

The Ant and the Dove

One hot day, a little ant was walking by a riverbank to drink water.

As she leaned over, she slipped and fell into the stream!

“Help! I can’t swim!
Someone please help.”

High up on a tree,
a kind dove noticed the tiny ant struggling in the water.

Without wasting a second, she plucked a green leaf and dropped it close to ant.

“Thank you, Dove! You saved my life.
I’ll never forget your kindness.”

Days passed. One afternoon, the ant saw a hunter aiming at the same dove with his bow.

Quick as a flash, the ant crawled up and bit the hunter on the foot!

Dove: “Thank you, little Ant! You saved my life too!”

Once upon a time. There was fox.
He was very hungry. He reached in a garden. He saw ripe grapes there. The grapes were out of his reach. He jumped again and again
but all in vain. At last he said,
"The grapes are sour."

MORAL:

THE GRAPES ARE SOUR

The Fox and the crow

Once upon a time.

There was a crow. He had a piece of meat.

A hungry fox came there. His mouth watered when he saw the piece of meat. He thought of a plan to get it.

He said, “Dear Crow, you have such a sweet voice! Will you sing a song for me?”

The crow felt proud and opened his beak to sing.

Moral :Beware of Flattery.

Never Depend on Excuses

Christopher was a boy who often made excuses and never studied. During exam time, while others prepared, he wasted time, thinking he could copy from friends. On exam day, he was made to sit alone. He panicked, not knowing ~~what~~ to write, and his face turned pale. The teacher noticed his condition and advised him to study seriously. Realizing his mistake, Christopher changed his habits. He began studying sincerely and worked hard for his future exams. His efforts paid off,

Moral: Work hard and make efforts

If You Hold My Hand

Foodle Rabbit was small and scared to go outside. His mother wanted him to explore the world, so she asked him to come with her.

Foodle said, „Only if you hold my hand!“

Mother smiled and held his hand. They went to the park. Foodle saw a slide. Mother asked, „Want to try?“

Foodle replied, „Only if you hold my hand!“

Later, they came to a stream. Mother asked, “Can you cross it?”

The Cake

Billy Bear wanted to bake a cake for dessert. He asked his mom for help, and they worked together in the kitchen. Billy tried to measure the flour, but the bag tipped over, making a big mess! He laughed, and his mom smiled, and they decided to clean up and try again.

The Lost Toy

Tina Turtle was playing in the garden with her favorite toy—Mr. Bouncy Ball. She tossed it high in the air and giggled as it bounced around.

But suddenly, the ball rolled into the bushes and disappeared!

Tina looked everywhere. “Where did it go?” she cried. Just then, Mother Turtle came and said, “Let’s find it together.”

They searched under leaves and behind rocks. Finally, Tina found Mr. Bouncy Ball near a flower pot.

22 The Monkey and the Crocodile

There once lived a crocodile in a river. On one bank of the river was an apple tree. One morning, the crocodile was longingly looking at a juicy apple. "I wish I could eat that," he thought aloud. Just then, a monkey appeared, plucked the apple and threw it at the crocodile.

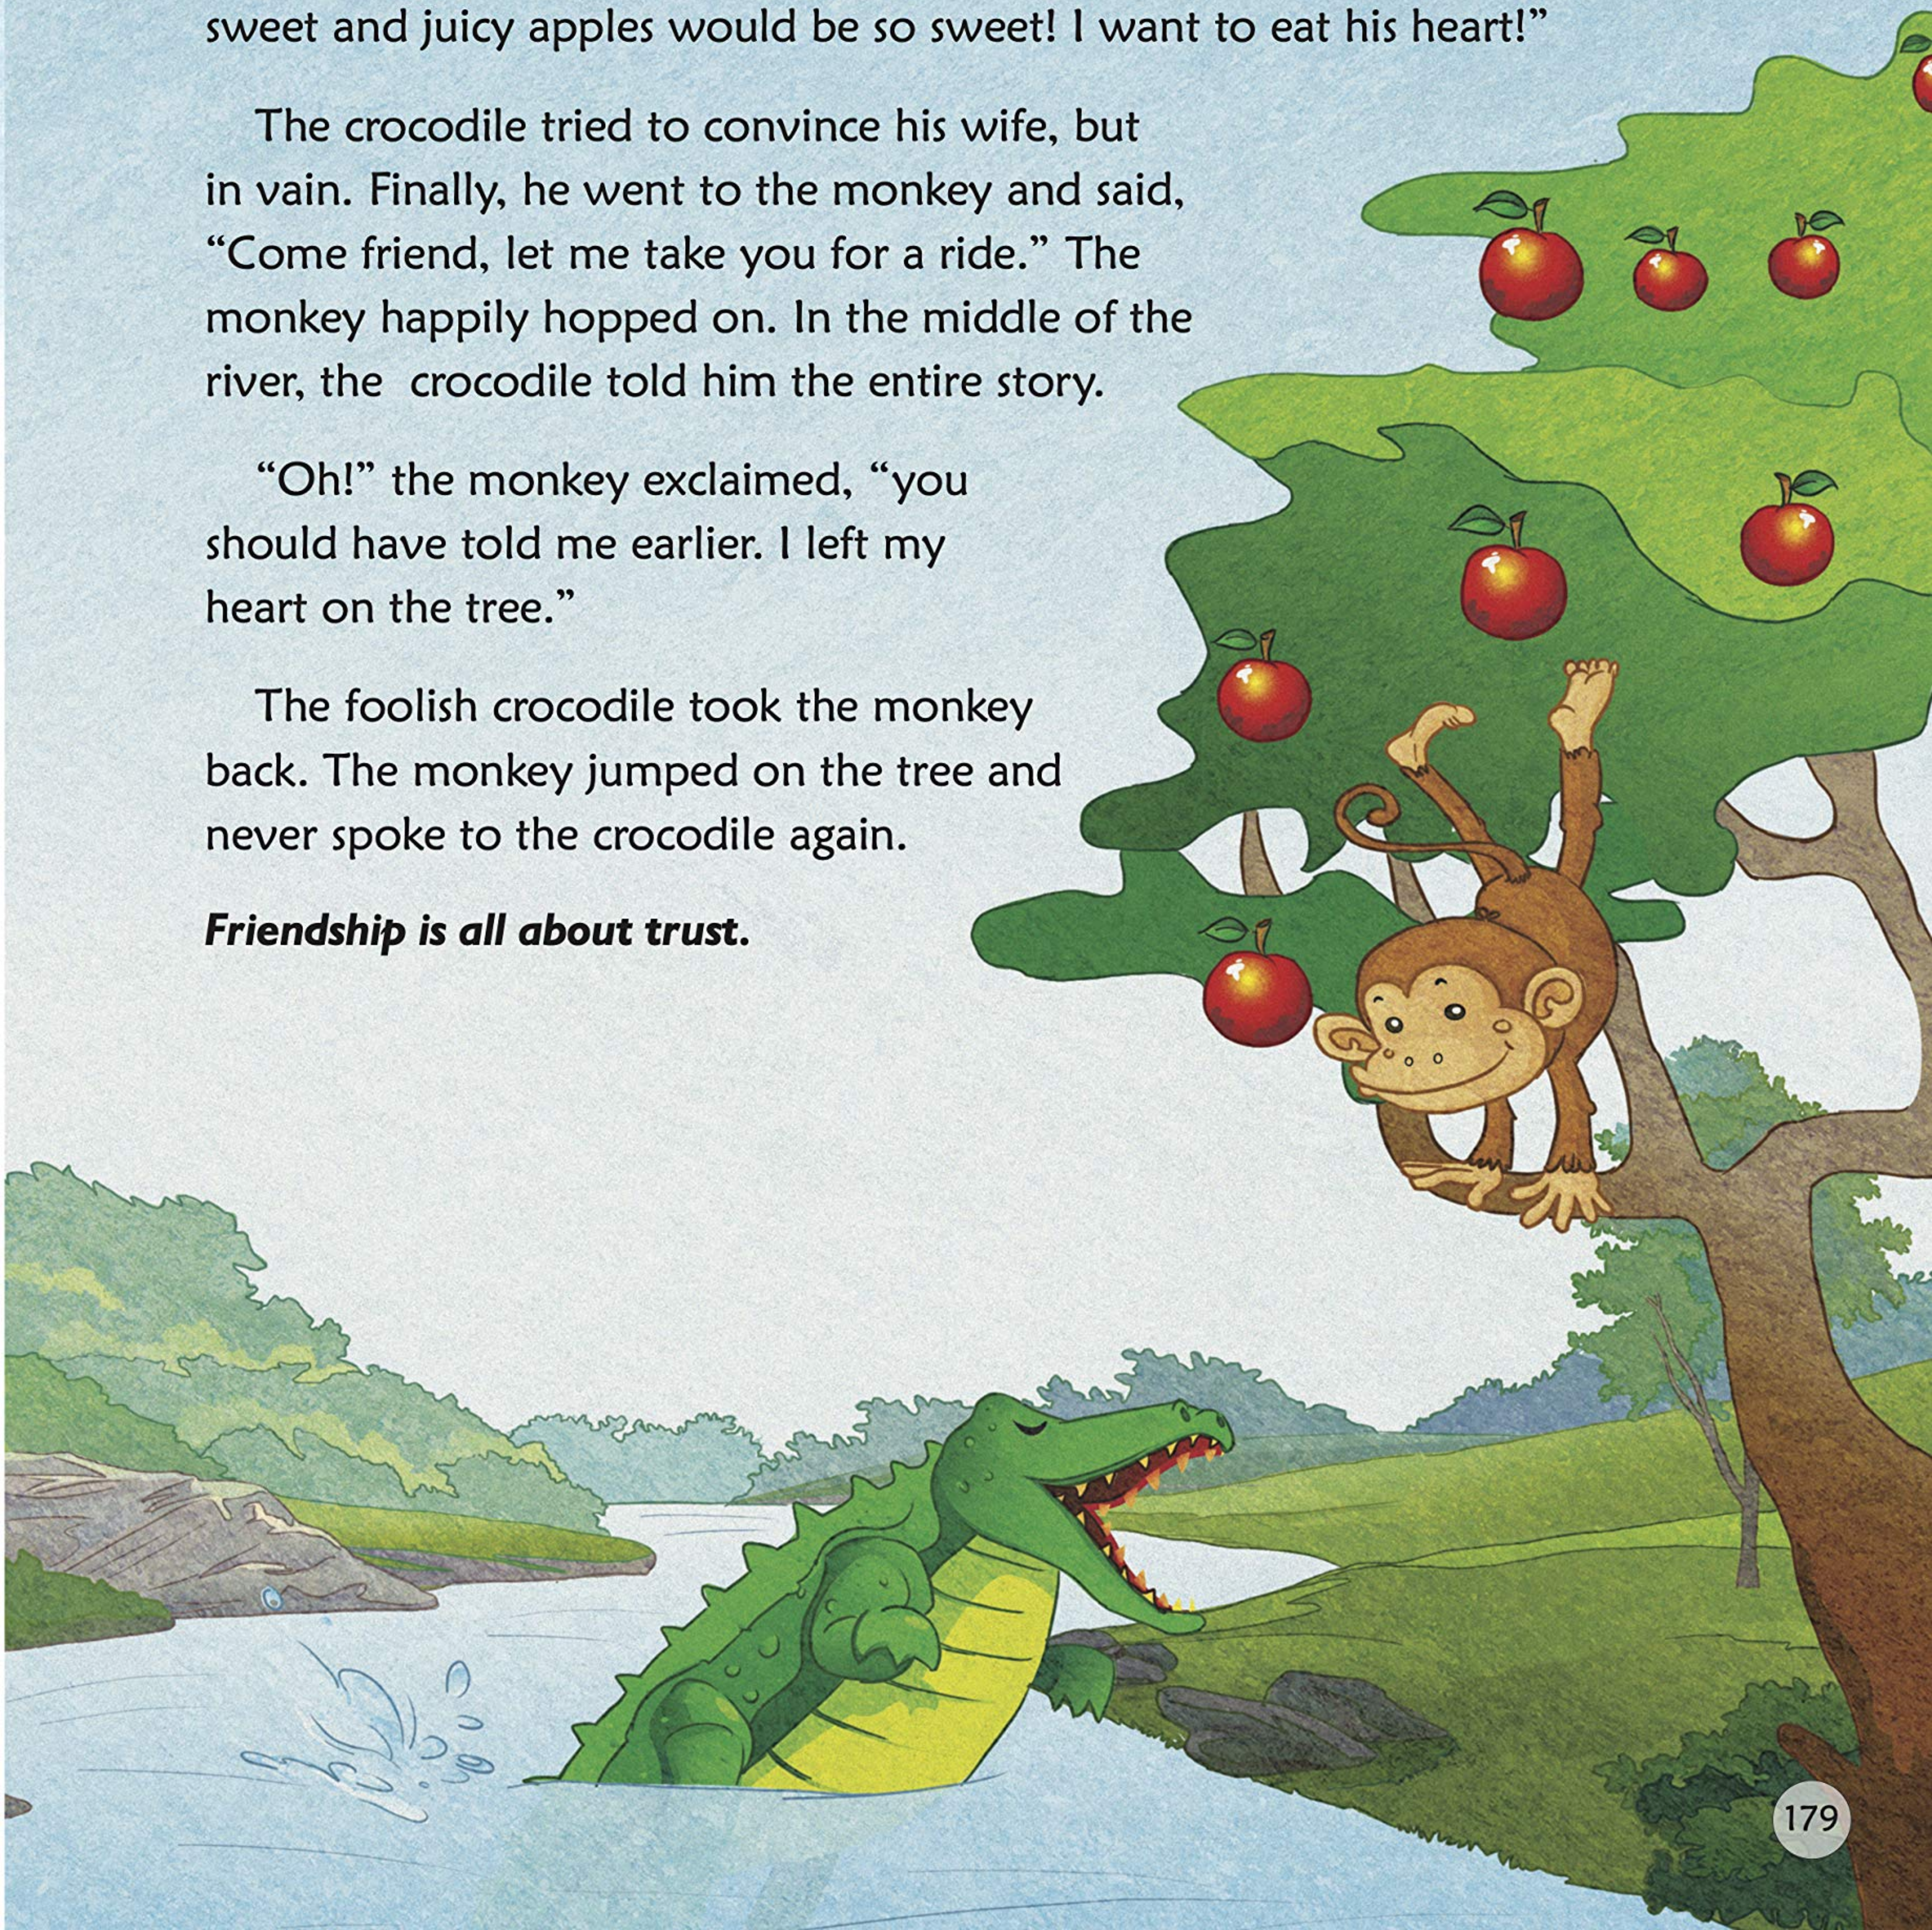

They soon became good friends. Seeing their friendship, the crocodile's wife got jealous. She told him, "The heart of a monkey who eats such sweet and juicy apples would be so sweet! I want to eat his heart!"

The crocodile tried to convince his wife, but in vain. Finally, he went to the monkey and said, "Come friend, let me take you for a ride." The monkey happily hopped on. In the middle of the river, the crocodile told him the entire story.

"Oh!" the monkey exclaimed, "you should have told me earlier. I left my heart on the tree."

The foolish crocodile took the monkey back. The monkey jumped on the tree and never spoke to the crocodile again.

Friendship is all about trust.

The Brave Little Rabbit

One day in the jungle, a fierce lion declared, “I will eat one animal each day. Come to me by turn, or I will kill you all!” All the animals were scared and agreed. Days passed, and it was the turn of a clever little rabbit. The rabbit walked slowly and reached the lion late. The lion got angry and roared, “Why are you so late?” The rabbit calmly said, “Another lion stopped me and claimed to be the real king!” The lion got furious and shouted, “Take me to him!” The rabbit led him to a deep well and pointed inside. He lion saw his own reflection and praised the rabbit for his bravery and cleverness.

The Wise Monkey

One day in the jungle, a crocodile saw a monkey eating juicy fruits on a tree near the river. The crocodile wanted the monkey's heart, so he tricked he monkey by inviting him to his home across the river. The monkey agreed and jumped onto the crocodile's back. In the middle of the river, the crocodile revealed his true plan.

The clever monkey stayed calm and said, "Oh! You should have told me earlier. I left my heart on the tree." The foolish crocodile swam back to the tree. He monkey quickly jumped off and climbed up the tree. He laughed and said, "You won't get my heart or my trust."

The Helping Elephant

One hot afternoon, a thirsty elephant was walking through the jungle searching for water. He saw a small bird lying helpless on the ground. The bird had hurt its wing and couldn't fly. Feeling sad, the elephant gently picked up the bird with his trunk and carried it to a shady tree. He gave the bird water and some fruits.

Days passed, and the bird got better. One day, the elephant fell into a deep muddy pit and couldn't come out. The little bird quickly flew to nearby animals and brought help. Together, they pulled the elephant out safely.

Moral: A small act of kindness can bring big help

The Lion in Trouble

Some days later, the Lion was walking in the forest. He stepped on a hunter's trap. Strong ropes caught his paws, and he could not move. He roared loudly, trying to break free, but the ropes were too strong. The Lion was in big trouble. He roared and roared, hoping someone would hear him and help. His roars echoed through the forest.

A Mother's Love

In a small forest, there lived a young deer named Fawn. He loved to run and play. His mother, Mia, always said, "Stay close to me. The forest can be dangerous."

One sunny morning, Fawn saw a butterfly and chased it. He ran far from his mother. When he stopped, he was lost. The forest now looked dark and scary.

Fawn called for his mother, but no one answered.

Suddenly, he heard something in the bushes. It was a fox—with sharp teeth and a mean smile!

Fawn was very scared. The fox jumped toward him. But just then, Mia appeared! She stomped her feet and stood in front of Fawn. The fox growled but ran away.

Mia hugged Fawn and said,

"No matter where you are, I'll always protect you."

Fawn promised to never wander off again.

That day, he learned something important:

A mother's love is strong, brave, and always there to protect you.

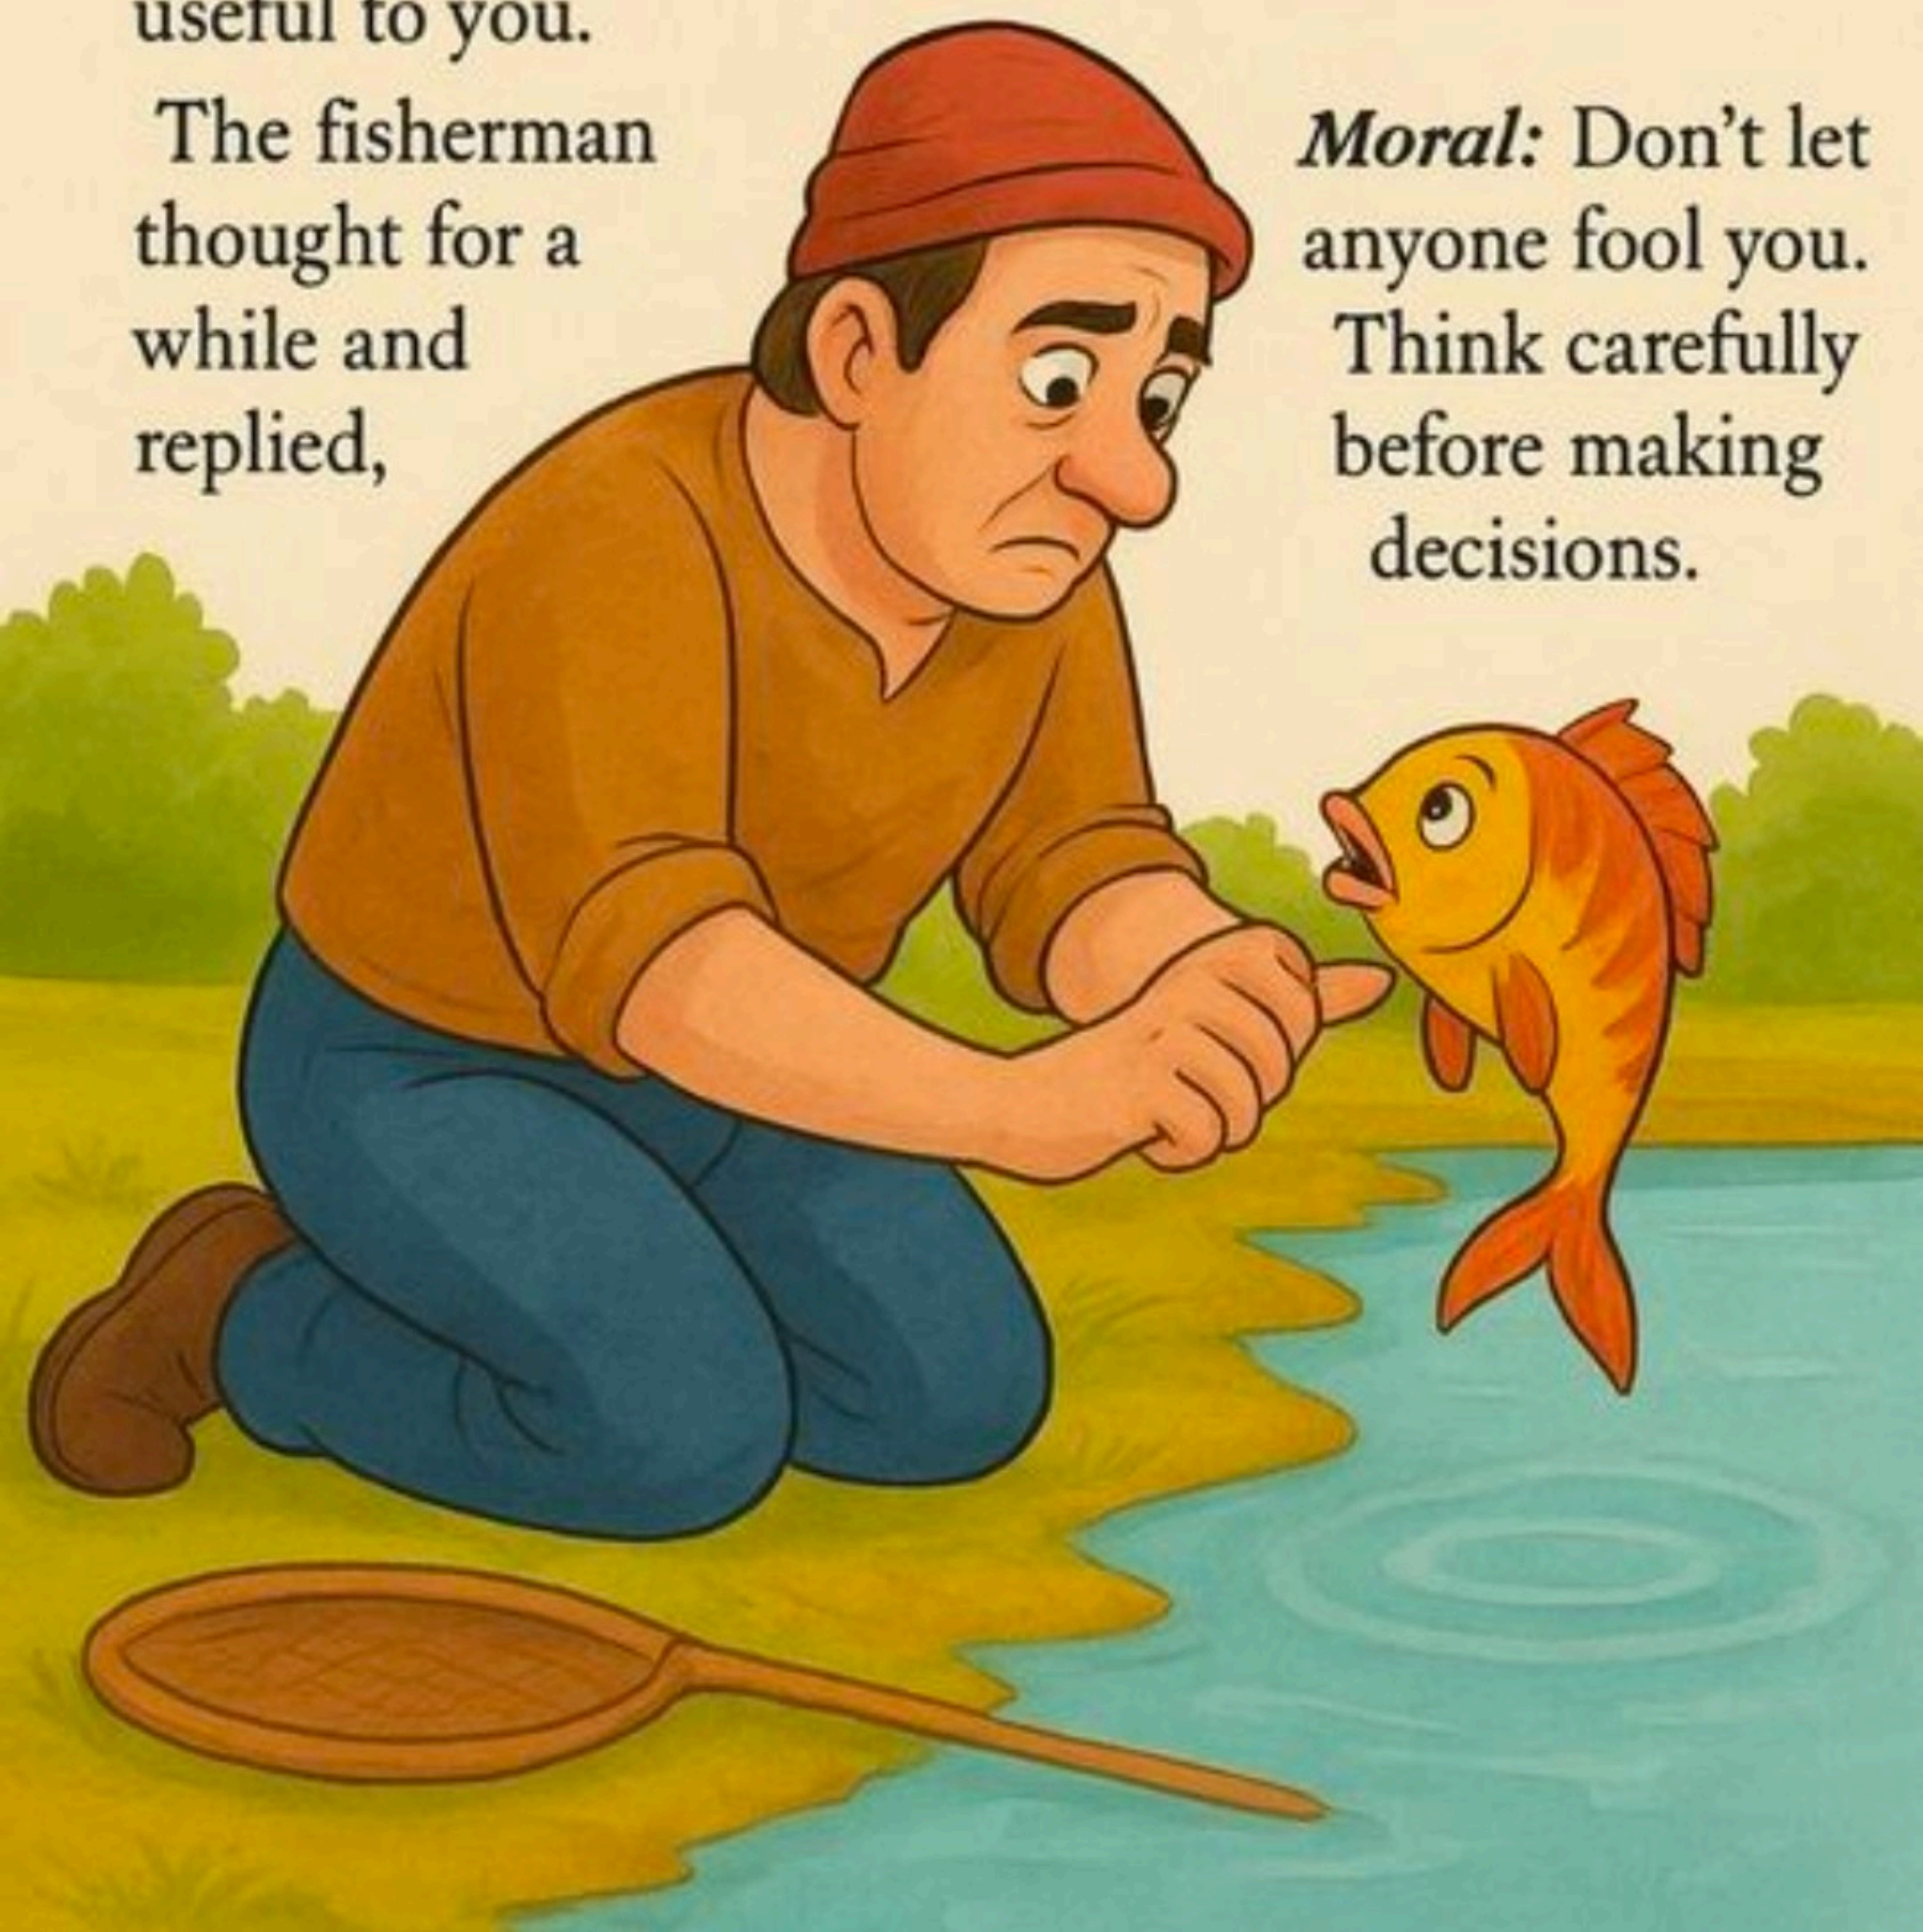

THE FISHERMAN AND THE FISH

One day, a fisherman throw his net into a pond and caught a small fish. He was very happy. But the little fish begged him to let it go.

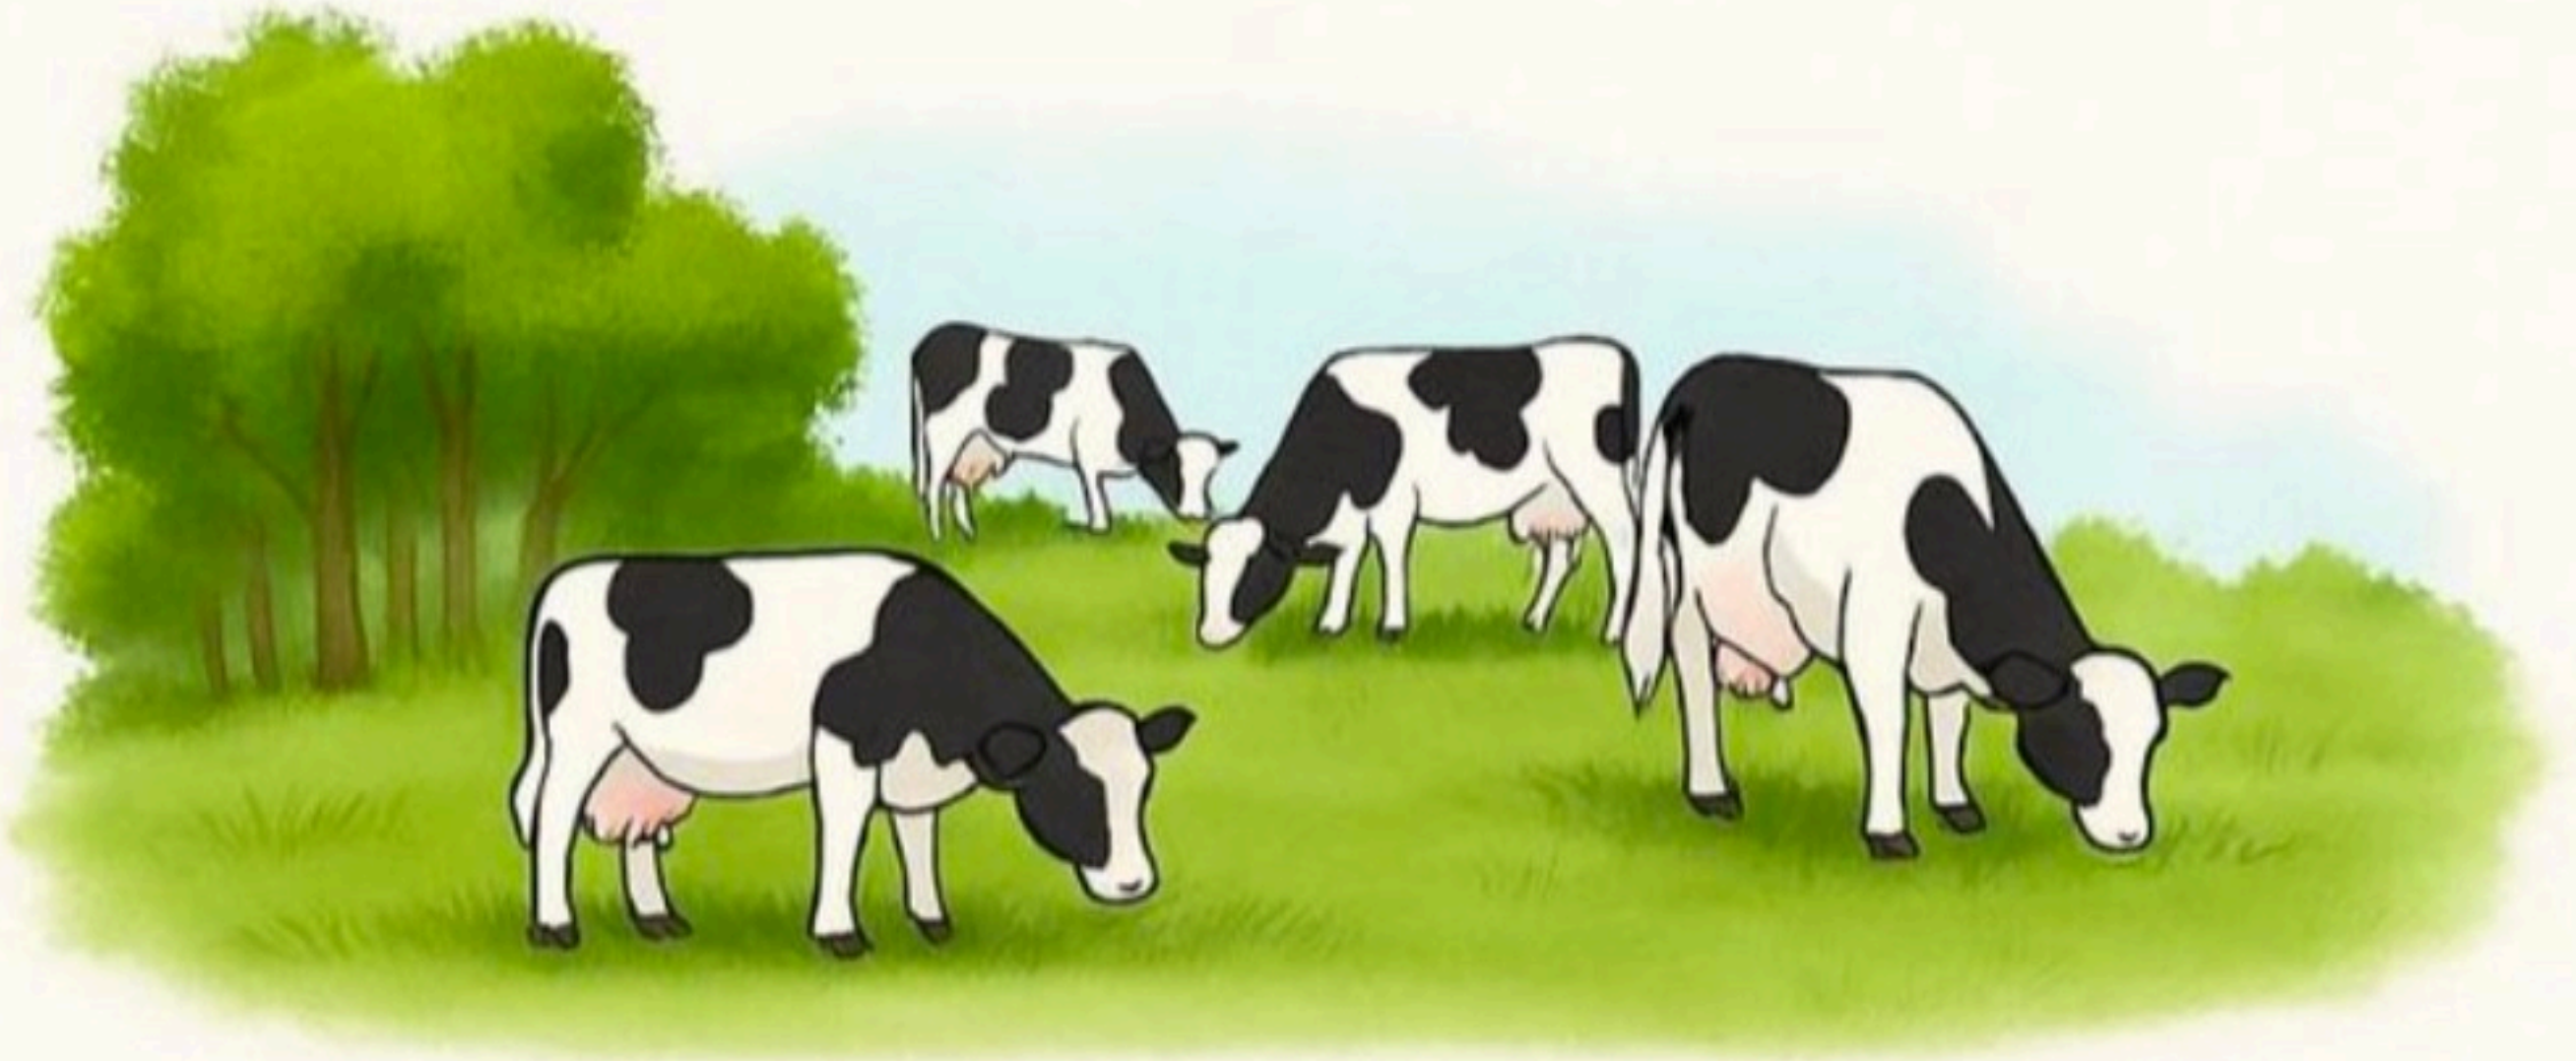

“Please don’t catch me now,” said the fish. “I am too small. I won’t be of any use to you. If you let me go, I’ll grow bigger, and then I’ll be more useful to you.

The fisherman thought for a while and replied,

Moral: Don’t let anyone fool you. Think carefully before making decisions.

The Cows and the Lions

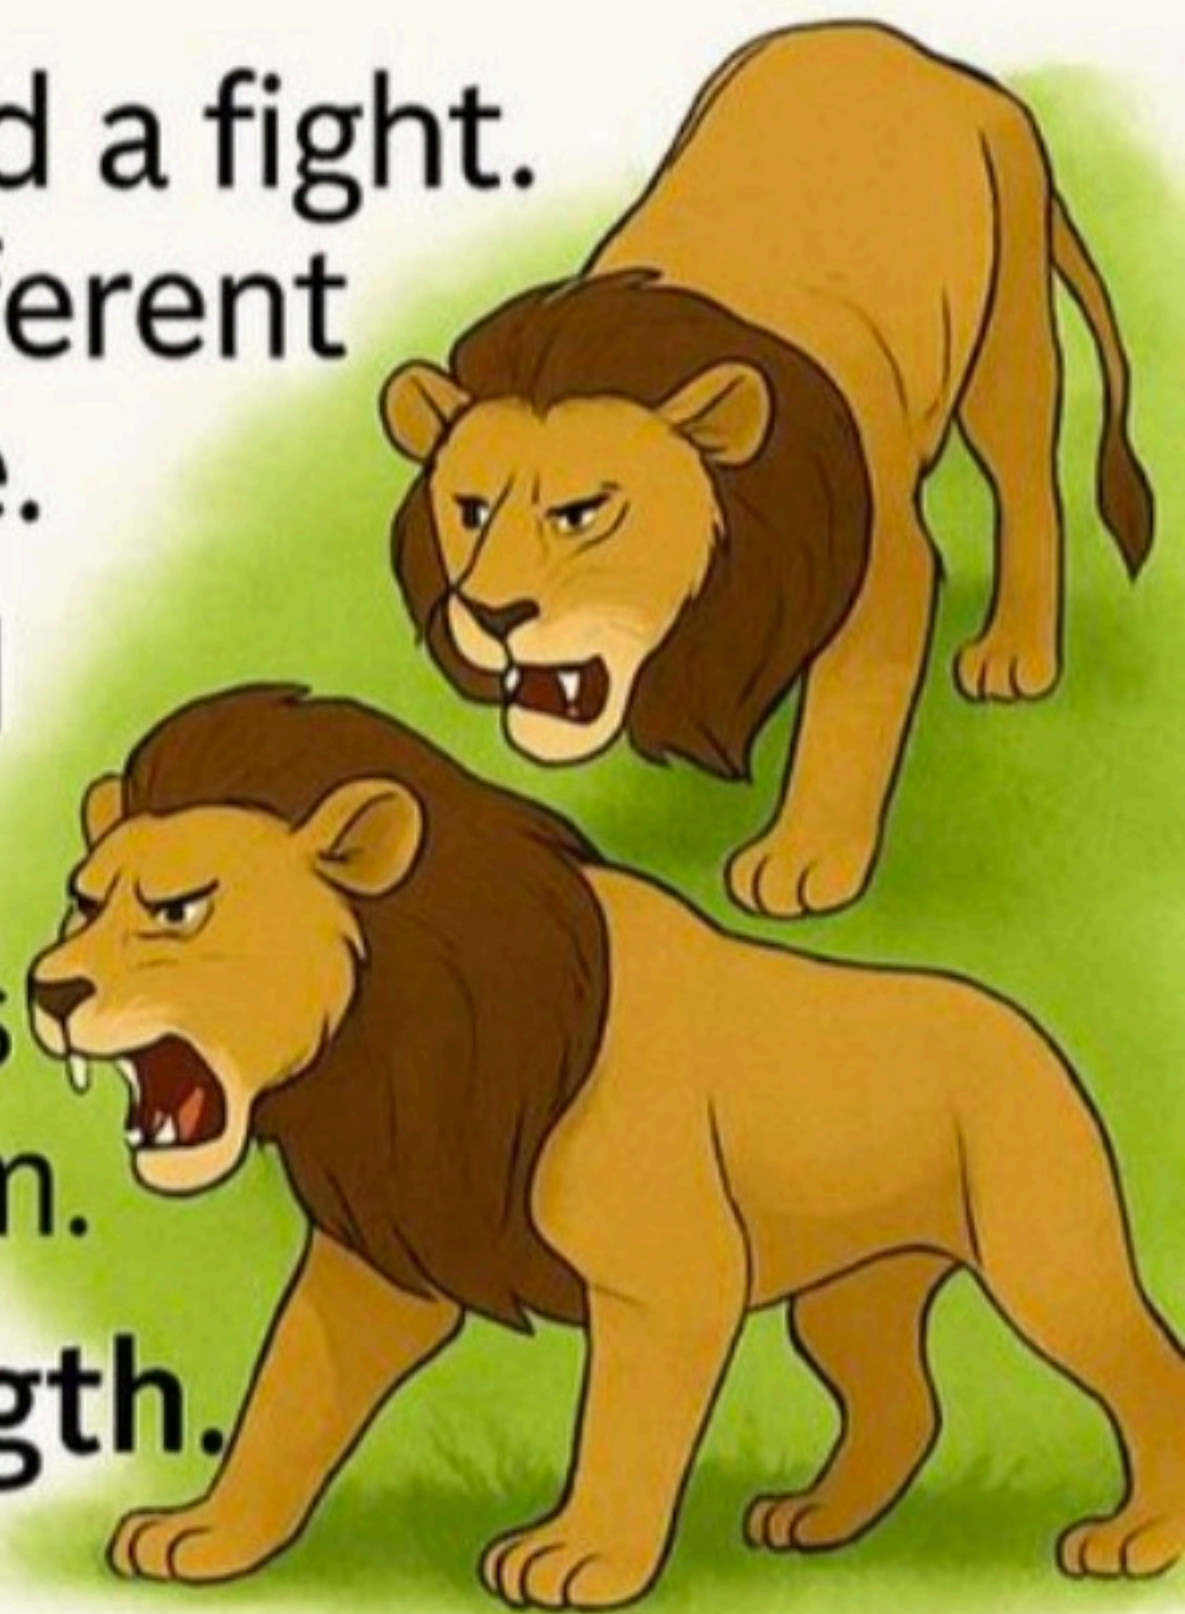

Five cows lived in a small forest. They ate fresh grass in a big green field. They were good friends and always stayed together.

Because they were united, the lions could not attack them.

One day, the cows had a fight. Each cow went to a different place to eat grass alone.

The lions saw this and took their chance. They attacked the cows one by one and ate them.

Moral: Unity is strength.

The Greedy Dog

One day, a hungry dog was looking for food. After a long search, he found a bone. He was very happy. He took the bone in his mouth and started walking home.

As he was crossing the bridge, he looked down and saw his reflection in the water. The dog thought it was another dog with a bigger bone!

He wanted that bone too. So, he barked loudly at the “other dog.” But as he opened his mouth, his bone fell into the water and sank.

Now the greedy dog had no bone at all.

Moral of the story: Don't be greedy.

The Monkey and Crocodile

Once upon a time, a crocodile lived in a river.
On the riverbank stood a big apple tree.
A monkey lived in that tree.

One day, the crocodile looked at the apples and felt hungry.
The monkey saw this and threw an apple to him.

They became good friends.
Every day, the monkey gave apples to the crocodile.

But the crocodile's wife was jealous. She said, "I want to eat the monkey's heart! It must be sweet because he eats so many apples."

The crocodile didn't want to hurt his friend,
But his wife kept asking.
So he invited the monkey
for a ride in the river.

Goodbye! You tricked me.
I will not trust you again.

The Lion and the Mouse

Once in a forest, a lion was sleeping under a tree after a big meal. A little mouse came by and started playing on the lion's back.

The lion woke up, very angry. He caught the mouse and was about to eat it.

"Please don't eat me!" the mouse cried. "I'll help you one day."

The lion laughed but let the mouse go.

A few days later, the lion was caught in a hunter's net. He roared for help.

The little mouse heard the roar and ran to help. It chewed the net with its tiny teeth and set the lion free.

the mouse became good friends.

The lion was very happy. From that day, the lion and Moral: Even the small can help the strong

Jim and the Old Lady

Jim was a poor boy, He was 11 years old and had no parents. He cleaned shoes to earn a little money. He hardly had enough food to eat.

One cold night, Jim was eating his small meal. Suddenly, an old lady knocked on his door.

She looked tired and hungry.

Jim had only one piece of bread, but he saw that she needed it more.

He gave his bread to the old lady.

She smiled and said, "Thank you, kind boy."

As she walked away, she turned into a bright angel! She was so happy with Jim's kindness that she gave him lots of food and gold.

From that day, Jim never went hungry again.

THE MAGIC POT

Once, there was a little girl named Tara. She lived with her mother. They were very poor and had little food.

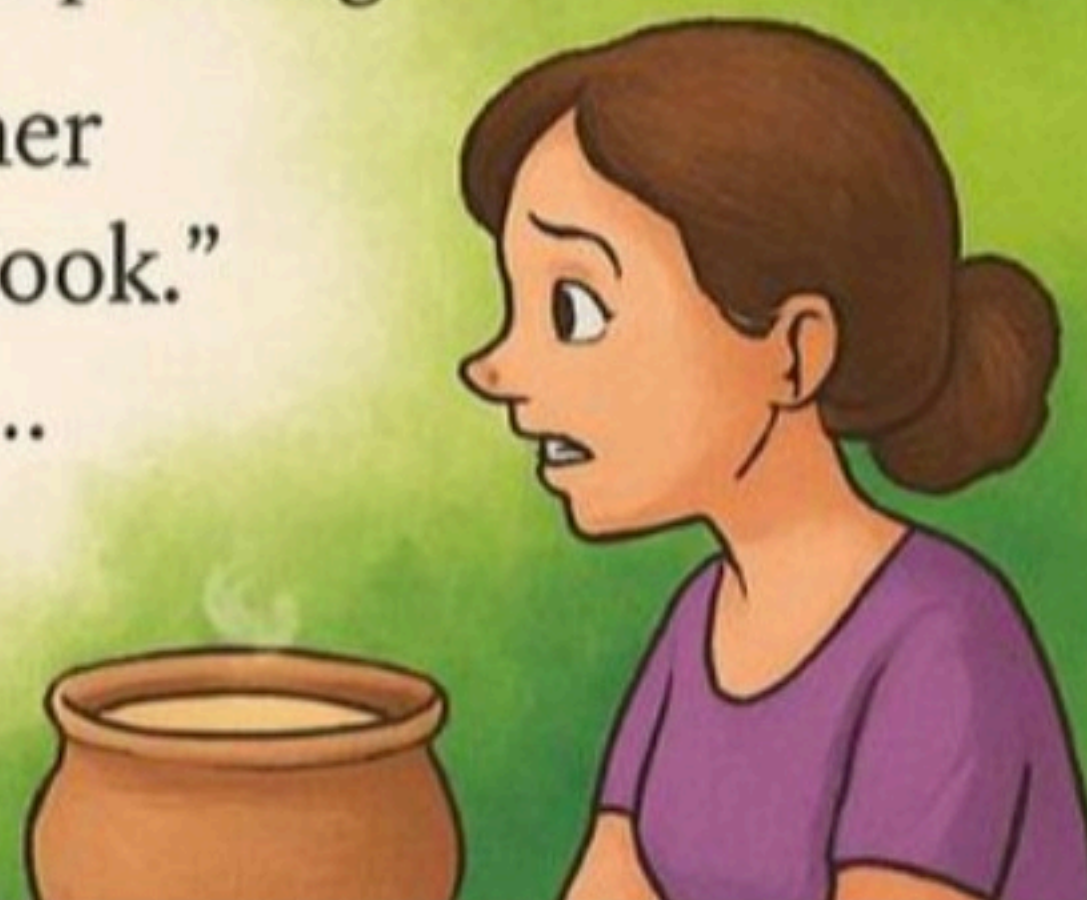

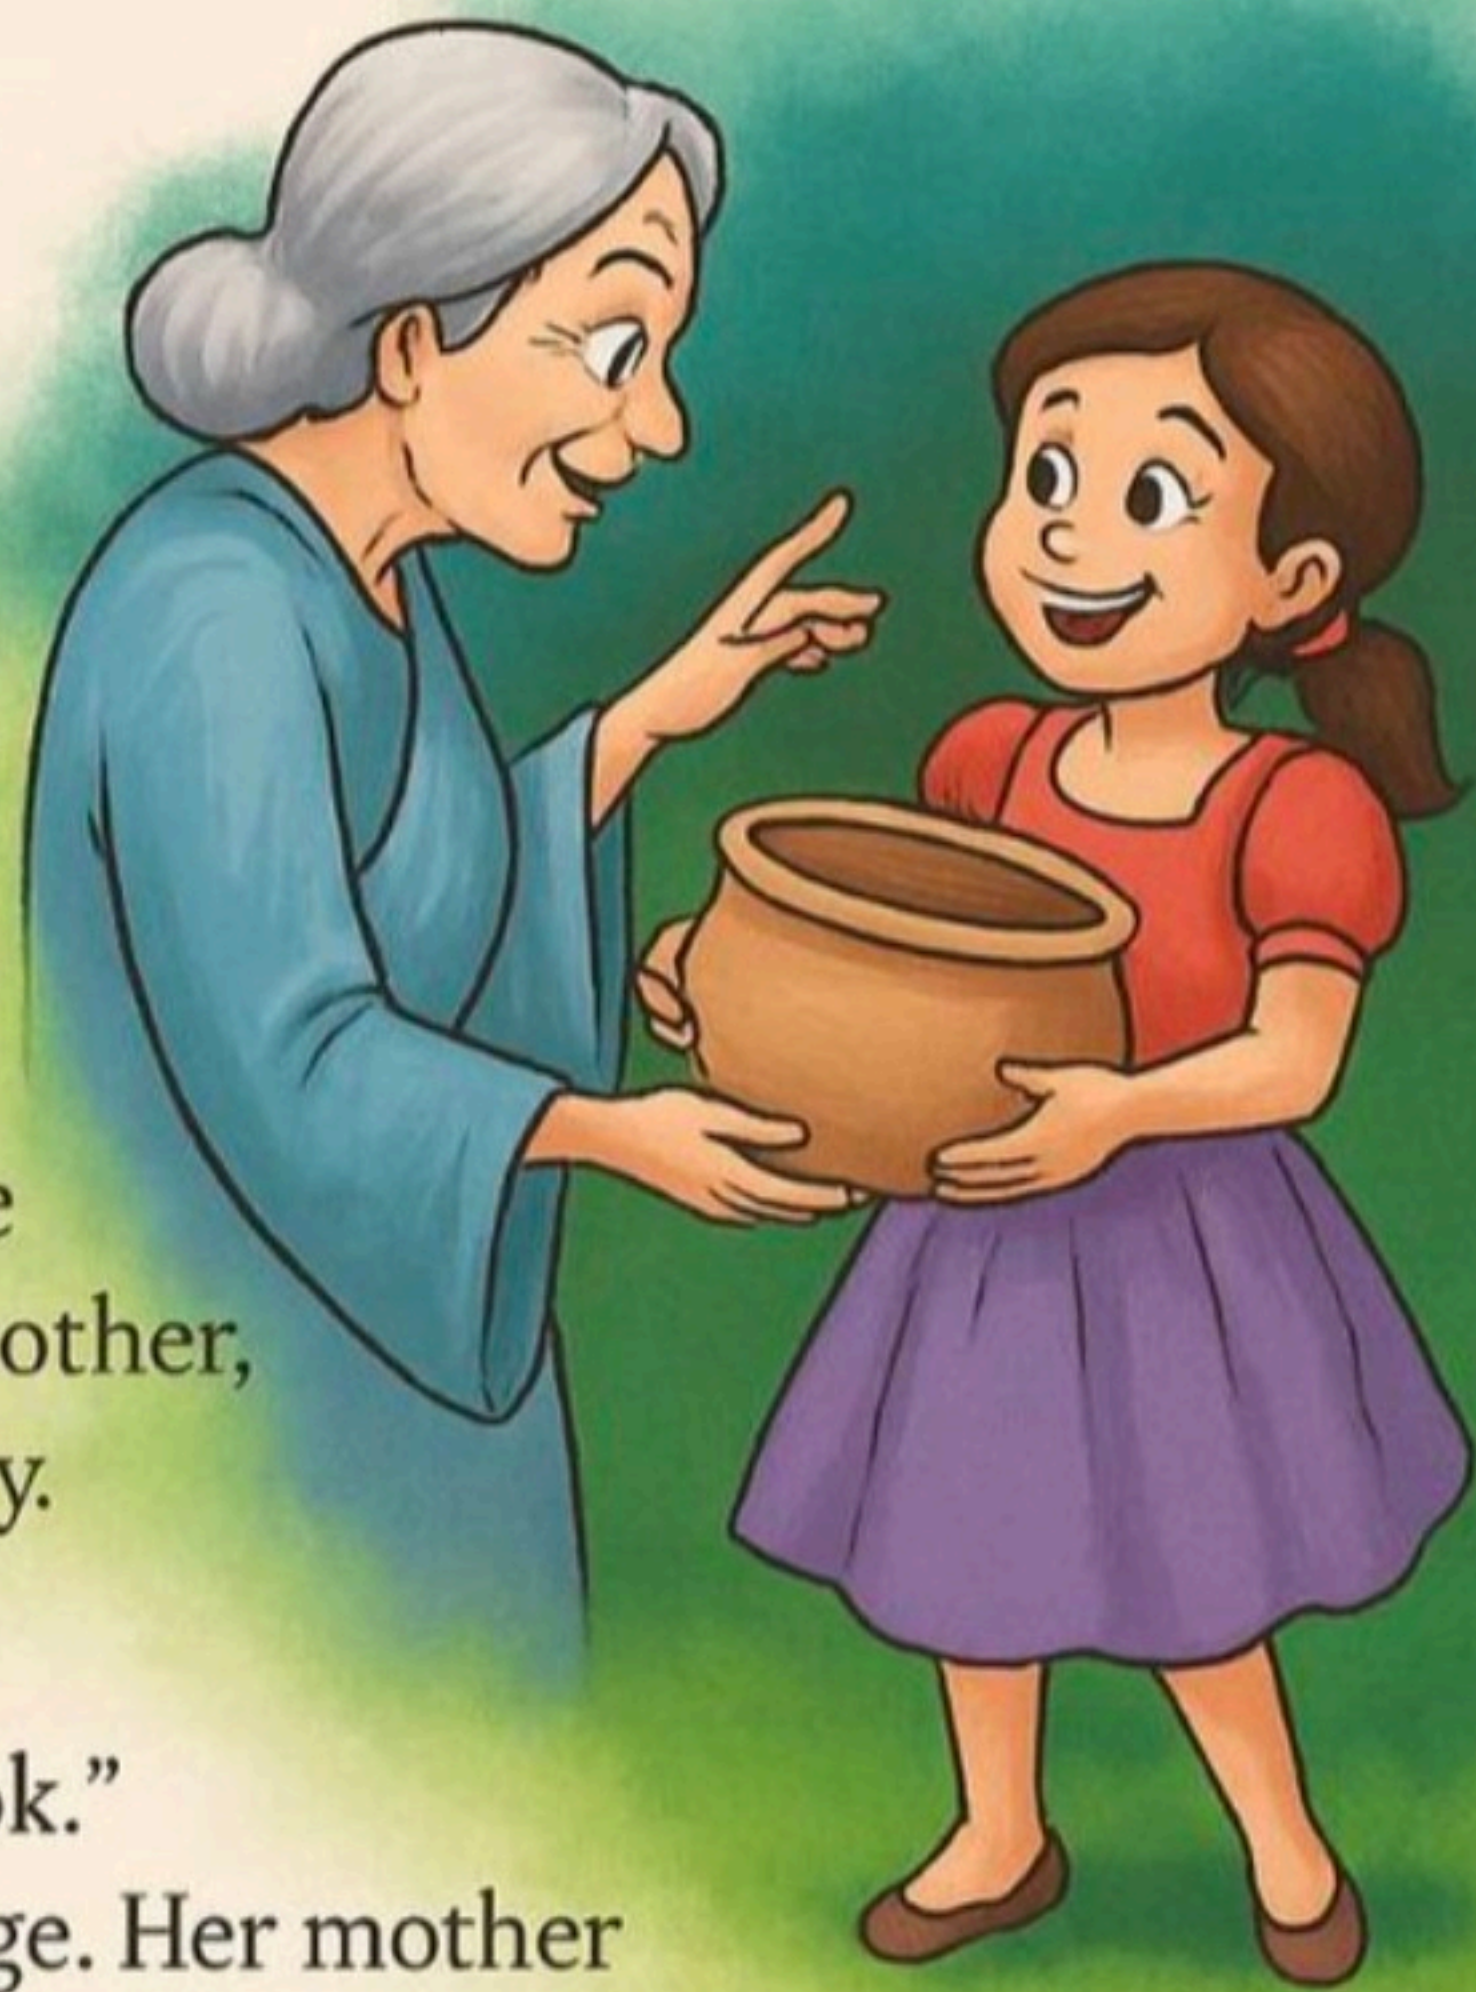

One day, Tara went to the forest. She met an old woman. The old woman gave her a pot and said:

“This is a magic pot. It will cook porridge when you say, Cook-Pot-Cook.” It will stop when you say. “Stop-Pot-Stop.”

Tara was very happy, She ran home and told her mother, “Now we won’t be hungry. We have a magic pot!”

Tara said, “Cook-Pot-Cook.” and the pot made porridge. Her mother was very happy. They both ate the porridge.

One day, Tara went out, Her mother felt hungry and said, “Cook-Pot-Cook.” The pot started cooking porridge...

The Dog and His Shadow

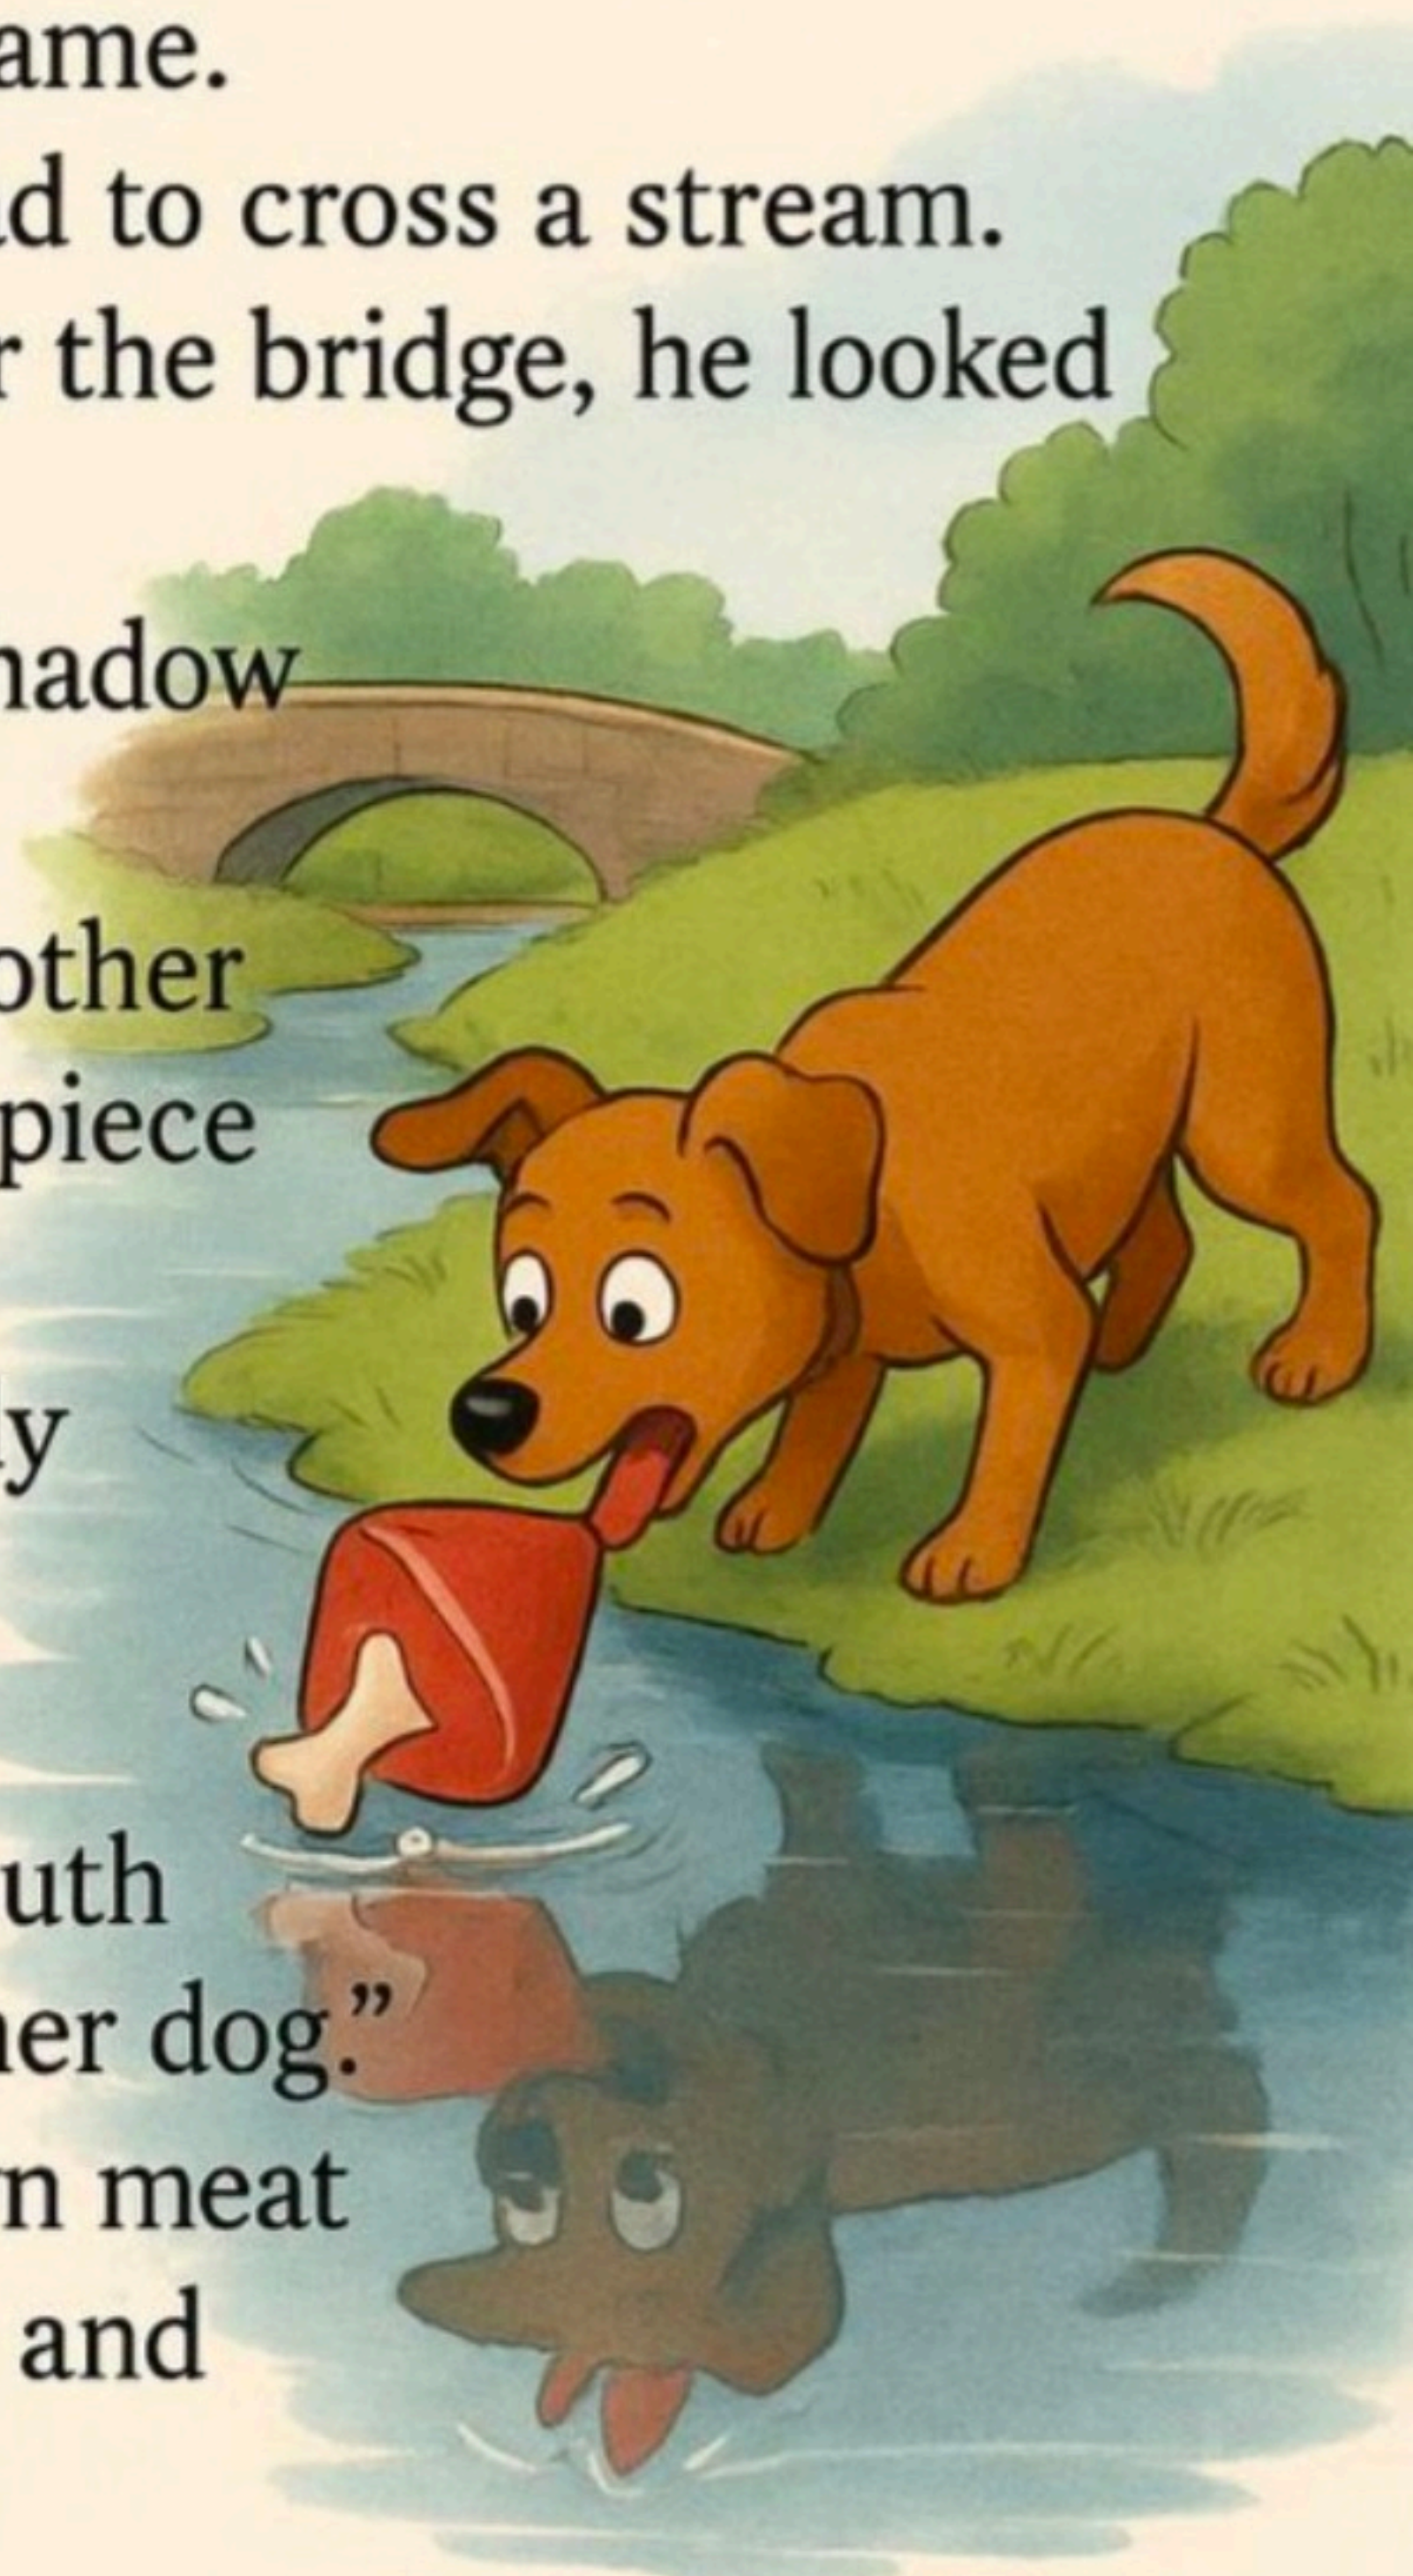

One day, a dog found a big piece of meat. He was very happy and carried it in his mouth to eat at home.

On the way, he had to cross a stream. As he walked over the bridge, he looked into the water.

He saw his own shadow in the water but thought it was another dog with a bigger piece of meat.

The dog got greedy and wanted that meat too.

He opened his mouth to bark at the “other dog.” But oh no! His own meat fell into the water and was gone.

The poor dog went home with nothing.

Moral: Don't be greedy.

The Lost Hat

One sunny morning, Lily the bunny hopped out of her burrow, excited to play outside. She put on her favorite red hat, the one with a blue flower on it. “I’ll wear this all day!” she said happily as she skipped toward the meadow to pick flowers and chase butterflies.

Lily played with her friends Max the squirrel and Bella the bird. They laughed and ran and flew around the tall grass. But when Lily sat down to rest, she realized something was missing—her red hat! “Oh no!” she cried. “I must have lost it while we were playing!”

Max and Bella quickly offered to help. “Let’s retrace your steps,” Max said. They searched near the pond, under the trees, and even inside a hollow log. Still, no red hat. Lily felt sad. “Maybe I’ll never find it,” she sighed.

Just then, Bella flew high into the sky and shouted, “I see something red near the flowers!” Everyone rushed over. There, caught on a bush, was Lily’s hat, gently swaying in the breeze. “Hooray!” Lily cheered as she hugged her friends. “Thank you for helping me!”

Chasing a Dream

There was a little girl who had everything she needed. But she had a big dream — she wanted to play with the stars in the sky!

Everyone told her it was not possible. But the girl didn't give up. One day, she started walking to find the stars on her own.

After walking a few miles, she met some fairies. She asked them, "Have you seen the stars?"

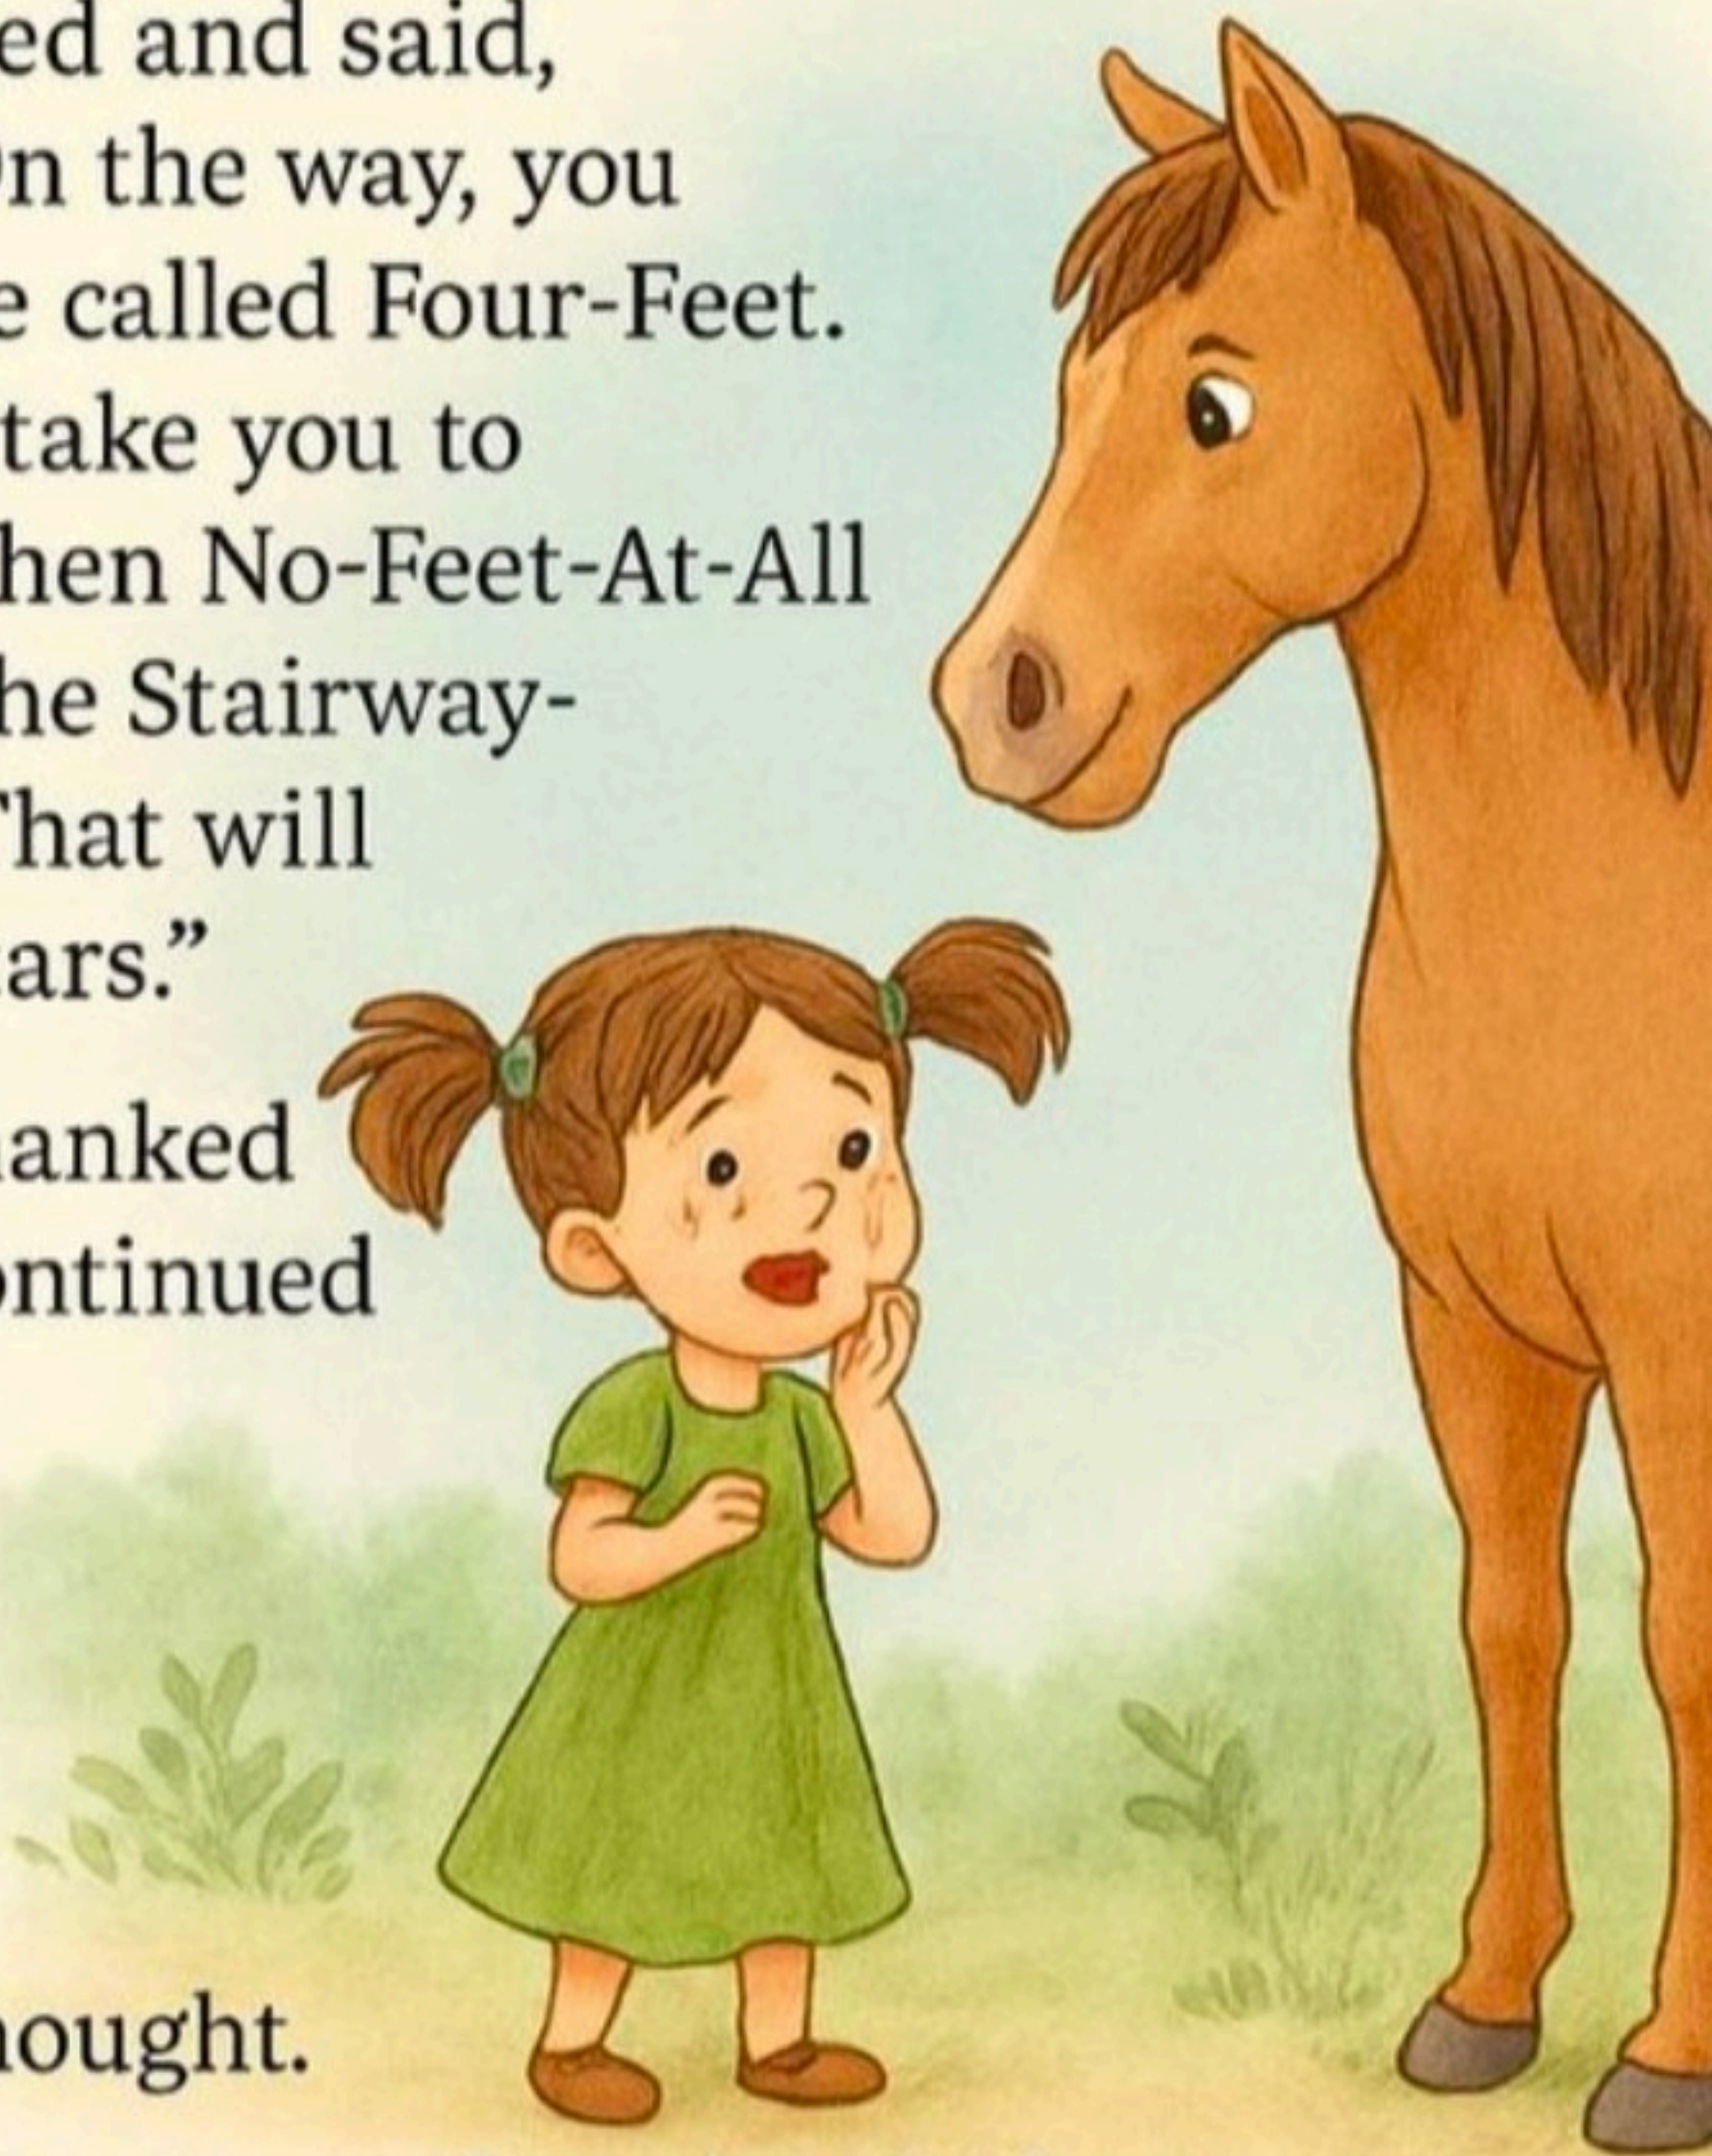

The fairies smiled and said, "Keep walking. On the way, you will find someone called Four-Feet. Ask Four-Feet to take you to No-Feet-At-All. Then No-Feet-At-All will take you to the Stairway-With-No-Steps. That will lead you to the stars."

The little girl thanked the fairies and continued her journey.

After a while, she saw a horse.

"This must be Four-Feet," she thought.

She asked, "Hello, are you Four-Feet? If yes, can you please take me to No-Feet-At-All?"

Once upon a time. There was fox.
He was very hungry. He reached
in a garden. He saw ripe grapes
there. The grapes were out of his reach. He jumped again and again
but all in vain. At last he said,
"The grapes are sour."

MORAL:

THE GRAPES ARE SOUR

The Fox and the crow

Once upon a time.

There was a crow. He had a piece of meat.

A hungry fox came there. His mouth watered when he saw the piece of meat. He thought of a plan to get it.

He said, “Dear Crow, you have such a sweet voice! Will you sing a song for me?”

The crow felt proud and opened his beak to sing.

Moral :Beware of Flattery.

Never Depend on Excuses

Christopher was a boy who often made excuses and never studied. During exam time, while others prepared, he wasted time, thinking he could copy from friends. On exam day, he was made to sit alone. He panicked, not knowing ~~what~~ to write, and his face turned pale. The teacher noticed his condition and advised him to study seriously. Realizing his mistake, Christopher changed his habits. He began studying sincerely and worked hard for his future exams. His efforts paid off,

Moral: Work hard and make efforts